Air Canada Slowdown Spreads

WINNIPEG (CP) — A slowdown by Air Canada maintenance workers, cargo personnel and baggage handlers that had caused delays on several flights at Toronto earlier in the week spread to Winnipeg Tuesday.

The workers, members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, have been without a contract since April 1. They are voting this week on whether to give union leadership a strike mandate.

Winnipeg Air Canada spokesman Vern Pryor said flights leaving the city have been delayed only slightly because of the action. He added the airline has asked the Canadian Labor Relations Board for a "cease and desist" order to force workers back to their daily routine.

He said one of the slowdown tactics includes driving baggage carts at slower-than-usual speed.

40% Net Fishing Illegal?

Allegations that up to 40 per cent of commercial net fishermen are fishing illegally have been laid before the Sport Fishing Advisory Committee.

The charges were made by committee member Howard English, who said he received the information from a commercial fisherman.

English said today the information was passed to him by a net fisherman, and it includes charges that net fishermen are evading fisheries patrol boats by fishing in packs, with one boat acting as lookout while the others fish.

Despite restrictions limiting them to fishing two or three days a week, the pack fishing sometimes takes place seven days a week, according to his informant.

Another member of the Sport Fishing Advisory Committee said today that if the charges of widespread illegal fishing by commercial net fishermen are substantiated the federal government should establish an "umbrella" agency using several resources — including RCMP, the Coast Guard and Armed Forces personnel — to beef up federal fisheries patrol and enforcement.

Bob Wright said the use of such agencies would avoid the need for vastly increased expenditure on additional personnel and equipment for the fisheries department.

"If you can get a federal umbrella agency formed you can get the job done at half the cost," said Wright, who is also a former sports fishing adviser to the International Pacific Salmon Commission.

English said today his source claims several other illegal fishing methods are used, including:

-Combination boats (combined trollers and gillnetters) conceal nets under the ice they carry for packing and set them in isolated areas at night, during closure periods;

-Combination boats have been seen fishing every night and trolling every day. Gillnet fish free of net marks have been sold for more money as troll-caught salmon;

-One boat will have two nets in the water and ply between them, safe in the knowledge that a lookout boat will warn them by radio of the approach of patrol craft;

-In 99 per cent of cases steelhead catches are not reported, but are sold as coho.

English said his informant claims that up to 40 per cent of the fishermen are involved in such illegal fishing methods, through which they make substantially larger catches than most legal fishermen.

He said the fact that illegal fishing takes place has been confirmed by the advisors to the IPSC, although the extent of the operations isn't known.

English noted that the federal fisheries department is seriously concerned about the escapement of chinook, and to a lesser extent about coho, in B.C. waters.

Illegal fishing, combined with the steadily increasing efficiency of both the commercial and sport fishing fleets, is accelerating that decline, he said.

Better technology, better lures and equipment (notably the fast-growing use of

Tentative Pact Ends Fish Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C.'s salmon fleet was heading for the fishing grounds today after striking tendermen and B.C. fishing companies reached tentative agreement following a marathon bargaining session for a new contract.

George Hewison, negotiator for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU), which represents the 600 tendermen, said tendermen voted on the agreement today.

The agreement came early this morning after 14 hours of talks among the UFAWU, the Fisheries Association and mediator Jack Waterston.

Hewison said the tentative agreement contains no provision for herring catches. Tendermen had opposed any effort by the association to include herring and salmon fisheries in one contract.

In return for the herring exclusion, said Hewison, the union has agreed to a commitment to sign the herring memorandum, which he says will obviate any strike action during the herring operation this year.

He estimated the total increase in wages and fringe benefits at about 10 per cent.

Tendermen currently earn $103 a day and many days involve extended shifts.

The dispute affected about 20 plants along the coast, had idled 14,000 fishermen and other workers and cost the industry about $20 million a week, industry and union spokesmen estimated.

Meanwhile, 4,500 shoreworkers, members of the same union, were expected to vote today on a contract offer from the Fisheries Association. Union negotiators have recommended acceptance.

A union spokesman said the offer to the workers, idled by the tendermen's strike, is for an hourly wage increase of 70 cents.

RCMP HUNTING THIRD VESSEL

RCMP revealed today a hunt is on for a third boat in connection with last Saturday's massive marijuana seizure at Obstruction Island near Tofino.

Superintendent Scotty Gardiner said a search is underway for the 38-foot troller, Sunfish.

He declined to say whether police suspect drugs are aboard.

An RCMP helicopter is in the area today for the third straight day and an unknown number of boats are searching the deeply indented coastline for some sign of the missing boat.

Police believe the Sunfish was travelling with the 120-foot Toernyn and 70-foot Weatherly before the early morning raid involving 50 police officers and 600 to 700 armed forces personnel.

The Sunfish, of Vancouver registery, is owned by Robert Sherman Miller, 33, one of 15 persons charged in connection with the case.

Miller is also the registered owner of the Weatherly.

The manager of the general store at Ahousat, an Indian village near Obstruction Island, told the Times the Sunfish tied up at the village dock sometime Friday. He said the boat apparently had trouble with its radar equipment and left after a few hours.

Gardiner said the boat slipped past police and armed forces vessels in heavy fog Sunday and hasn't been seen since.

"They might have ditched it, repainted it, scrapped the superstructure or run the boat into a cove and covered it with foliage. Anything is possible," he said.

Meanwhile, police this morning began destroying the 439 bales of high grade Colombian marijuana — an estimated 13 tons, worth about $28 million on the street — which were seized in the operation.

A truck loaded with the drug left CFB Esquimalt at 9 a.m. under heavy police escort bound for the North Cowichan municipal dump where it was to be fed into an incinerator.

Gardiner said two complete bales and a collection of random samples — about 150 pounds in all — would be saved for evidence in the court case.

Two RCMP members from Newfoundland are in Victoria to look into a possible tie-in with a similar operation in Newfoundland in 1974. In that case about $4 million worth of marijuana was found stashed in caves in an isolated coastal cove in the province.

Carter Kills Soviet Sale

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, reacting to hardening U.S.-Soviet relations, has killed a computer sale to the Soviet Union and imposed White House veto authority on the sale of oil equipment to Russia, sources said.

A top administration official said the steps were part of a general reaction to the Soviet trials and convictions of two Russian dissidents and two U.S. reporters.

"It is the product of the whole situation," he said Tuesday night.

The Soviets recently convicted dissidents Alexander Ginsburg and Anatoly Shcharansky, despite U.S. protests, and found reporters for The New York Times and the Baltimore Sun guilty of libel.

"The president has taken an appropriate step," said Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd. "He has backed up United States criticism of Soviet oppression with concrete action. The civil trial and sentencing of two American journalists was the Soviet Union's contemptuous answer to world criticism of that nations's program of cruelty to its own citizens."

Carter decided to kill the sale of a sophisticated Sperry-Univac computer. A White House source, when asked whether the sale might be revived at a later date, said it was dead.

The president has been under pressure from several members of Congress, including Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., to block the sale.

The president also put all U.S. oil equipment being sold to the Soviet Union on the commodities control list — a move that means the sales must have presidential approval before being completed.

Also reflecting the colder relations with the Soviet Union, Russian embassy officials were told to meet with State Department representatives to discuss the fate of the Tass office in San Francisco.

That action was seen as a direct response to the trial of two U.S. reporters — Harold Piper of the Baltimore Sun and Craig Whitney of The New York Times — who were convicted on the charges by a Moscow court Tuesday.

No date was set Monday for the meeting of the Russians with U.S. officials soon in Washington. There was no elaboration on the planned meeting, but the move raised the possibility the Tass office in San Francisco would be shut down.

Hostage Taker Suicides

MAPLE CREEK, Sask. (CP) — A man who held a 16-year-old girl hostage for more than 12 hours shot and killed himself today after he released the girl unharmed at an RCMP roadblock near this community about 95 kilometres east of Medicine Hat.

The incident began Tuesday morning when two men, one carrying a shotgun, held up a motel in Brooks, Alta., 175 kilometres east of Calgary, and escaped with an estimated $1,100, police said.

The men then grabbed the girl working as a waitress in the motel restaurant and forced her into a getaway car, police said.

The car headed for Calgary on the Trans-Canada Highway, trailed by RCMP vehicles.

Late Tuesday night, the wanted car reached Calgary and was followed by police through city streets for several hours until one of the men left the car, apparently to look at street signs, and he "walked around the corner straight into the arms of some of our guys," said Insp. Don Nelson of Calgary city police.

The suspect, a 15-year-old, was in RCMP custody, he said.

At one point a window of a police car was shot out after it strayed too close to the getaway car, Nelson said, but no one was injured.

The car containing the suspect and hostage left the Calgary area with police pursuing it.

Ferries Threat Defused

The Labor Relations Board Tuesday defused a dispute that tied up a B.C. Ferries vessel and threatened to lead to a system-wide strike.

Board vice-chairman Ron Bone met with the corporation and the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union and convinced them to try to resolve issues through grievance procedures and without further work stoppages.

However, the board placed an officer on standby in case either side needs assistance.

The union had complained of understaffing on the ferries, safety problems due to overloading and management intimidation of employees.

Thirty-two workers aboard the Queen of Coquitlam walked off the job before the 2:30 p.m. sailing Monday.

The ferry left for Nanaimo following a meeting between the LRB and the union. Traffic at Horseshoe Bay was backed up more than two kilometres.

E. J. Bentley, a spokesman for the ferry corporation, said the dispute was minor and involved the corporation's critical appraisal of an employee's work. He refused to elaborate.

Union spokesman Bob Peacock accused the corporation of trying to diffuse the issue.

"It's not a small dispute," he said. "It could domino into a full-scale strike."

He said the work stoppage was the culmination of months of frustration with management over staffing and safety issues and management's disregard for workers' complaints.

Indians Lose Fish Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federal Court of Canada refused Tuesday to order the federal fisheries department to allow native Indians to fish in the Fraser canyon while a two-day ban is in effect.

The Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs had applied for an injunction against the ban, which was imposed by the fisheries department because of low salmon counts.

On Monday, fisheries officers laid six charges of illegal fishing and seized about 20 salmon in Lillooet, B.C. as native Indian fishermen defied the ban in effect for Monday and Tuesday on the Fraser River.

The ban was ordered from Boston Bar to north of Lillooet because of low counts of early sockeye salmon headed for the Stuart Lake spawning grounds northwest of Prince George.

Lawyer Louise Mundell argued that under federal fishing regulations for B.C., fisheries officers had no right to impose the ban because they had first issued food fishing licences for Monday and Tuesday but later changed the dates.

This, she said, was against the intent of the regulations.

The ban also caused irreparable harm for band members affected because it stoped their historical fishing and denied them a source of food, said Mundell.

Robert Wismer, a fisheries department lawyer, said that under the regulations the Indian food licences must be considered a concession to the band members since non-Indians are prohibited from taking salmon upriver.

In dismissing the injunction application, Judge Frank Collier said it was his opinion that sections of the fishing regulations merly permit the Indians to fish and the ban was therefore not illegal.

He added that since the ban was for two days, and at the time the injunction application was being heard there was only about half a day left on it, the loss to the Indians could not be a disaster.

Fall Postal Strike Seen 'Inevitable'

OTTAWA (CP) — Crucial postal conciliation talks entered a new phase Tuesday amid fears a disruption in the mail this fall is inevitable.

Louis Courtemanche, chairman of a three-member conciliation board, began closed mediation sessions with negotiators for the post office and the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers following a record 32 days of public hearings.

The closed sessions are usually more productive than the open hearings, generally used to set out the basic positions of the disputing parties. They will have to be if a strike or lockout is to be avoided.

So far, out of 40 articles in the union's contract, only 10 non-contentious items have been resolved.

Still unsettled are the critical issues of pay, use of casual labor by management, job security and the effects of automation.

In a closing statement to the conciliation board at the open hearings, union negotiators said they had "many doubts as to the prospects for success" in the negotiations.

And Jean-Claude Parrot, the union president, repeated his earlier conviction that he has no doubt there will be a strike by the inside workers, likely this fall.

In the statement to the board, the CUPW accused government officials of lying about the conduct of the union and its collective bargaining proposals.

Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne, meanwhile, has expressed concern that the union is not bargaining with "good will" while CUPW has accused postal authorities of using unprincipled tactics to hurt those who are perceived as influential within the union.

The union is also looking for a pay raise to $8.25 an hour from the current $7.14 hourly average, an increase of 15.5 per cent. Postal officials have not made a wage offer.

The United States is also facing postal problems.

Postmaster-General William Bolger is warning each of 554,000 U.S. postal employees that they might be fired if they go on strike when their contract expires at midnight Thursday night.

In letters delivered to postal workers Tuesday, Bolger warned that striking employees would also be committing a felony and might forfeit paid health- and life-insurance coverage.

His letter came as the contract talks were deadlocked over management efforts to eliminate a no-layoff clause the unions insist on retaining in the new contract.

Mideast Talks End Deadlocked

MAIDSTONE, England (Reuter) — Egyptian-Israeli peace talks ended today with an announcement that U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance will visit the Middle East in about two weeks.

After the two-day talks at nearby Leeds castle, Vance issued a statement acknowledging that major differences remained between Israel and Egypt.

He said Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel would be reporting to their governments.

"I anticipate there will be further meetings when I go to the Middle East in about two weeks," he said.

The second and final day of the conference opened in a gloomy atmosphere with the two sides virtually deadlocked.

In Jerusalem, Israel's Parliament erupted in a shouting match between Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Opposition leader Shimon Peres.

Peres accused Begin of "filling a prescription for Israel's isolation."

Begin countered by asking Peres, who met with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat last week in Austria, if the Labor leader had discussed territorial compromise between Israel and the Arabs.

On the first day of the London talks, Sadat cast a pall over the scene by threatening, in a speech in Khartoum, that there would be no more Egyptian-Israeli contacts unless Israel softened its position.

A joint statement said Tuesday's talks were "serious and straightforward," which in the language of diplomacy means each side made its position clear and there was no significant movement toward agreement.

Meanwhile, President Sadat told the African summit meeting in Khartoum today that Israel was "still dreaming of expansion" and said it could be "the cause of grave damage" in the Mideast.

Sadat delivered the speech before 33 heads of state at an Organization of African Unity meeting shortly before the talks between Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers in England ended.

LEG IRONS ORDERED

PRETORIA (Reuter) — South Africa's police, running short of leg irons, have advertised for 200 pairs.

The shortage comes at a time when prisons and police cells are overcrowded partly by the continuing crackdown on black opponents of the government's apartheid policies.

New Prescription Labels Tested

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Pharmacists Society, with approval from the ministry of human resources and the College of Pharmacists, is testing a new labelling program which would give pharmacists a standardized record of drug use by patients receiving drugs through the provincial government's pharmacare program.

Society president Frank Archer said the program, being tested in 25 stores, involves a fourth copy of a prescription, instead of the current three, which would go to the pharmacist.

Archer said the new scheme, if put into regular use, could increase the cost of prescription by a maximum 20 cents.

He said the first copy now goes with the drug, the second is the patient's receipt and the third goes to the government pharmacare program. The fourth copy now goes on a patient profile card.

He said most pharmacists already keep such a file anyway.

"We think the patient profile is a great idea," he said. "Certain drugs are dangerous when combined with other medications. A doctor might not know that a patient is seeing other doctors or is taking other medication.

"The druggist would check the customer's profile and if something looks wrong he would contact the doctor. The pharmacist needs to get more involved with his customers and knows the most about drug effects."

ESCAPER CAUGHT

ST. ETIENNE, Que. (CP) — Police cordoned off a 30-square-kilometre area near this village southeast of Montreal today as they searched for one of four convicts who escaped Laval Institute July 11 after a bloody gunbattle in which a guard and another prisoner were killed.

Earlier, they captured a second escaper, 23-year-old Andre Chartrand, following a brief shootout shortly after dawn.

Police spokesman Ronald Brunet said they surprised Chartrand, 23, and 27-year-old Ghislain Gaudet while they were camping in a tent alongside the St. Lawrence River.

downriggers by sport fishermen) and the change to nylon nets from linen are all factors that add up to a greater catch and more pressure on the salmon resource.

English said the object of laying the information about illegal fishing before the Sports Fishing Advisory Committee was to underline the need for increased enforcement and more stringent regulations to protect the resource.

Wright said present enforcement is totally inadequate for one of the longest coastlines in the world.

He said the use earlier this week of naval vessels and personnel to back up a police drug swoop on Vancouver Island's West Coast shows that they can also be used in an ancillary role for fisheries enforcement.

Kids Ran from Fire

NAKUSP (CP) — Children are thought to have caused a fire Tuesday that destroyed the arena and recreation complex in this southeastern British Columbia village.

Fire chief Danny Santano said three young children were seen running from the empty building minutes before the fire alarm was turned in. There were no injuries.

He estimated that the cost of replacing the complex would be about $1 million.

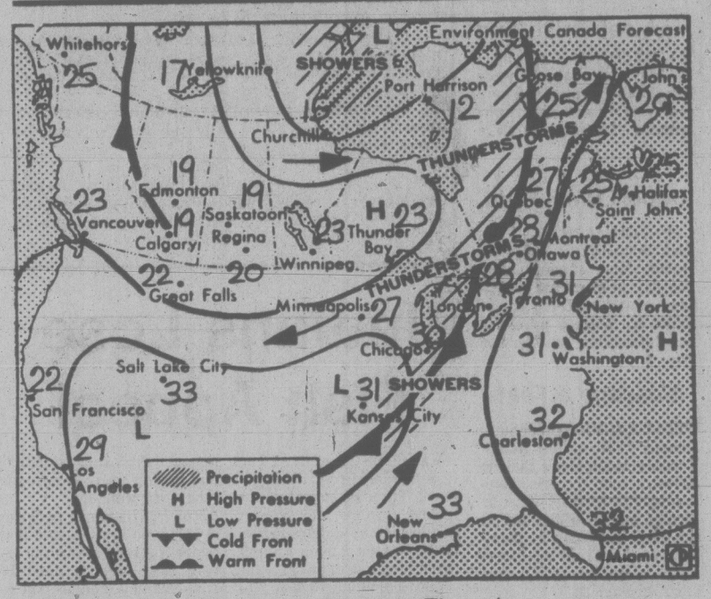
the weather



Map valid until noon Thursday

A myriad of stars twinkled through a transparent ridge of high pressure overnight with only a few fog patches between B.C. and these galactic lights. The ridge is still building and should remain over the province through the week providing plenty of sunshine and seasonably warm temperatures. There will, of course, be the regular summer high features with a smattering of afternoon showers along the Rockies and a few patches of low cloud and drizzle along the coast. Though its a bit early to be definite there's a rumor that the ridge has reservations for some of the Captain Cook celebrations this weekend.

Olympics: A Troubled Waif Nobody Wants?

Times News Services

There probably will be Olympic Games in 1984 but for now the games are as good as homeless.

They almost certainly will not be in Los Angeles, the only city that offered to host them, and despite certain suggestions in the U.S. Congress and elsewhere, Canada does not want them back.

Mayor Tom Bradley, who led the fight to bring the games back to the city that hosted them in 1932, threw in the towel Tuesday, announcing the IOC had rejected the latest of a series of last-ditch attempts to find a financial formula acceptable to both the city and the committee.

"That proposal having been declined by the IOC, I am therefore recommending that the (City) Council withdraw the city's bid for the 1984 Olympic Games," said the mayor, a former college track runner who spent years trying to get the games.

His support for the Olympics was swamped by a tide of taxpayer suspicion and may cost him heavily in voter support.

Opposition to hosting the games — an increasingly dubious honor in view of the expenses, political problems and violence they now bring — mounted steadilily and the IOC and the city have been locked in an increasingly bitter wrangle over finances.

Even Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal, the flamboyant optimist who brought the Games to Canada in 1976, showed no desire Tuesday to get them back to Montreal.

"Montreal will wait for developments and, if the International Olympic Committee (IOC) finds itself at an impasse, we will examine the situation to see how best we can help them find a solution," he said cagily.

Iona Campagnolo, federal sports minister, said in Ottawa on Tuesday she doubts Montreal should bid for the Games if Los Angeles pulls out.

"If California, one of the richest states in the United States, cannot undertake an Olympics I feel it would be irresponsible for Canada to do so."

There would be renewed capital costs if Montreal held the Games, she added. The shooting and archery ranges would have to be renewed and the Olympic Village is occupied by private renters.

Nick Auf Dar Maur, an opposition city councillor in Montreal and a strong opponent of the 1976 Games, said Tuesday, however, that Montreal is in a strong bargaining position.

"I think we should sit down and draw up a serious possible budget and see how much it would cost to have the Games here again. Our enormous deficit in 1976 was due to the capital costs and they have already been spent."

However, he said he would still like to see proof that holding the 1984 Games would not leave the city with a deficit.

BLAZE HITS U.S. MISSION

MOSCOW (UPI) — A small explosion and electrical fire knocked out power today in the U.S. embassy.

The blast, which slightly injured an American Navy Seabee, occurred in a basement electrical power control room near the embassy commissary.

The basement of the main embassy building was evacuated and embassy workmen wearing oxygen masks managed to extinguish the blaze within 10 minutes.

The cause of the fire was not immediately known. But witnesses said the Seabee enlisted man had alerted commissary employees and cashiers to light candles because the lights were going out.

Then he threw the switch on a power panel there was a blast and fire.

The American embassy has not been completely restored since a fire late last August that burned out the three upper floors.

Book Recalled After Death Of U.S. Baby

TORONTO (CP) — A book on infant nutrition is being recalled by its publisher from bookstores in Canada and the U.S. because of the death of a Florida baby.

Julian Muller, vice-president of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc. of New York, said Monday the book, Let's Have Healthy Babies by Adele Davis, will be reviewed by medical experts.

He said in a telephone interview the Florida infant died after his mother fed him a massive dose of potassium chloride, recommended by the author as a treatment for colic.

"Upon our examination of the section in question we are pretty well convinced, as best we can evaluate it as lay people, that this was a misreading," he said.

A baby in Waterloo, Ont., almost died last fall after his mother read the book and fed him potassium chloride.

Christopher Brown was revived at a Kitchener hospital after his heart stopped. His condition was diagnosed as potassium chloride poisoning. He was transferred to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto and has since recovered.

Dr. J. Hamilton, head of gastroenterology at Hospital for Sick Children, said he has never heard of the substance being used as a remedy for colic.

Potassium chloride is a natural salt and is used as a salt substitute for people with heart disease and other conditions precluding the use of table salt.

RADICALS BLOCK RAILS

NARITA (Reuter) — Left-wing radicals, opposed to Tokyo's new international airport here, disrupted rail services to the airport today by placing concrete blocks across tracks and hanging car tires from power cables.

Two empty passenger trains were stopped by the obstacles, which were later removed, police said.

It was the latest in a series of attempts to sabotage Narita Airport, 60 kilometres east of Tokyo, since its opening two months ago.

New Battle for McCarthy

MONTREAL (CP) — Patrick McCarthy, 24, began yet another round of court action Tuesday to block his imprisonment and expected deportation by federal immigration authorities, his Montreal lawyer said.

Lawyer Michael Berger said he had filed an application with Federal Court here for issuance of a writ of habeas corpus forcing the immigration department to show cause why McCarthy is being detained. The motion also calls on the court to grant a writ of prohibition blocking execution of the deportation order.

The move followed a ruling earlier in the day by an independent adjudicator, who decided that McCarthy must stay in a Quebec provincial police detention centre here until a deportation order is executed.

Berger said the latest court action will oblige the immigration department to delay deportation at least until Monday, when the case can be heard before the Federal Court in Ottawa.

"I was assured that he will be available from now until Monday . . . that he would not be sent from the country before Monday at the earliest," Berger said.

The immigration department had thrown a shroud of secrecy over its deportation plans following the adjudicator's ruling, saying no further announcement would be made until McCarthy was on his way out of Canada.

Berger said the deportation order is not valid because it was already "carried out" last week when McCarthy was flown from Vancouver to the Netherlands and back to Canada again in an unsuccessful deportation attempt.

Dutch authorities denied him entry after he kicked up a fuss and created a minor disruption at an Amsterdam airport, an immigration department spokesman said.

Immigration authorities contend the Irishman is wanted in Dublin in connection with a 1977 bank holdup, but McCarthy has denied the allegation, saying it is a case of mistaken identity.

WELFARE CUTS STILL RAY GOAL

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Governor Dixy Lee Ray says that in spite of court action halting her proposed welfare cuts, she will continue efforts to put employable welfare recipients to work.

She said in a statement Tuesday that because the cuts in short-term benefits are before a court, "I cannot and should not make any statement which might influence that deliberation."

When Thurston County Superior Court Judge Hewitt A. Henry granted a 10-day temporary restraining order Monday blocking the cuts, he said a later hearing would take up the question of their basic legality.

He blocked Department of Social and Health Services emergency rules that would have cut non-continuing general assistance grants from $212 to $60 a month to save an estimated $7.5 million.

"Although the court order halts action of the department to reduce welfare payments to employable adults, it will not stop us in our effort to have these people move into jobs, particularly in the private sector, and off welfare," she said.

Highly Dangerous

The McDonald royal commission investigation of wrongdoing by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police has produced, heaven knows, enough startling and shocking revelations — barnburnings, theft of dynamite, forcible abduction of suspects — but it continues to provide unexpected insights into the minds of the people who direct the national police force.

On Tuesday, the commission heard from Chief Supt. Donald Cobb, who headed the special anti-terrorist unit in Montreal in the early 1970s, about the phoney communique he issued late in 1971, pretending it was actually from the revolutionary Front du Liberation du Quebec. It told FLQ members to ignore Pierre Vallieres' pitch against violence and in favor of peaceful democratic politics via the Parti Quebecois.

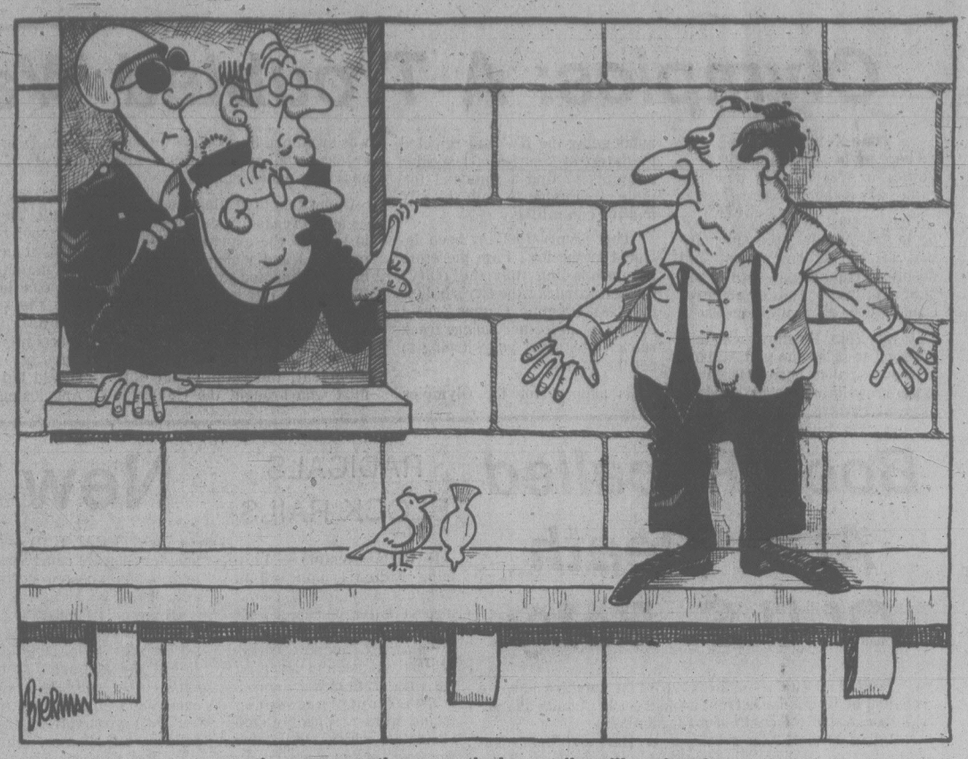
It was published as genuine by newspapers and by Time magazine also, Cobb thought. He never doubted that putting out fake communiques — "disinformation" in intelligence jargon — was within his terms of reference, he told the commission on Tuesday.

The real shocker, however, came from Pierre Lamontagne, the RCMP's legal spokesman at the commission, who successfully resisted efforts by one of the commissioners to question Cobb about whether or not he had discussed such tactics with his superiors in Ottawa.

"I'm trying to protect the public's right not to know," he told the commission, to smiles and laughter. But he said he was serious. If Cobb had to answer the question, "we'll have the whole picture made public of how officials in Ottawa make decisions," said Lamontagne. "It's highly dangerous."

Of course! Let the public actually know what's going on in their government, let them get an inkling of the decision-making process and who knows the lengths they might go to? Gosh, we might even have to call it a democracy. Maybe the RCMP couldn't go around anymore burning down barns and stealing dynamite and issuing fake documents inciting people to violence.

It's dangerous, all right.



"... patience, son, patience ... the beer strike will not last forever."

In the Spirit of Giving

The annual report of the chief electoral officer on donations to the federal political parties has been published, and it reveals a particularly Canadian trait among our big business corporations: bet-hedging.

Many big companies and industrial enterprises last year gave almost identical amounts to both Liberals and Conservatives. Perhaps it is because of the law's compulsory disclosure that no innately cautious and conservative business organization wants to be seen favoring either one.

The Tories say that corporate donations to their party are down, probably because donations now are made public. Last year, they got $1.7 million from corporations; the Liberals gathered $2.3 million. (Altogether, Conservatives took in $3.8 million, Liberals $4.4 million.)

B.C. Forest Products and Canron steel each gave $10,000 to the Liberals and the Conservatives, while Dominion Foundries and the Royal Bank and Bank of Montreal donated $25,000 of their shareholders' funds to each in the cause of democracy. Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce gave the former $25,000 and the latter $25,195.

MacMillan Bloedel gave the Tories $13,500 and the Liberals $14,295.60. What was the 60 cents? we wonder. Two cups of coffee for the bagman? Alcan handed out $13,000 to the Grits, $12,700 to the Tories. Gulf Oil reversed priorities: PCs got $28,610.10 and Liberals $22,247.20.

From Ford, currently trying to squeeze $35 million in grants and subsidies out of the federal and Ontario governments in return for building an auto assembly plant in the province, Conservatives got $16,000 and Liberals $15,000. If it is successful, not a bad return on investment.

Inco split $40,500 between the two parties, the Liberals getting $500 more. Alberta Gas Trunk Line, which is going to build the Arctic gas pipeline, provided the Liberals with one of their large corporate donations — $30,800 — but gave the Conservatives $15,934.40. Power Corp., the massive conglomerate based in Quebec, gave the Liberals $23,565.65 and the Conservatives an even $21,000.

Meanwhile, individual donors sent in cheques (tax deductible, too) totalling $2 million for the Liberals, $1.7 million for the Conservatives. The Socreds and New Democratic Party were not neglected: $2:2 million was sent to the socialists by some 60,000 individuals, but some of that was earmarked for provincial parties. The federal Socreds got just $172,000.

But two chunks of that amount came from Social Credit's demon enemies, the banks and financial institutions. The Commerce Bank sent them a $2,000 gift and IAC (a consumer loan company) gave them $7,500. Are they unaware Social Credit (at the federal level, anyway) is still out to abolish finance companies?

A Game That Everyone Won

BONN — They did it. By "playing poker," as Prime Minister Trudeau put it, the seven western leaders at the economic summit here managed to leave their oval bargaining table with more chips in each of their pockets — quite a few more chips in fact — than when they started. Some of these surplus chips will be turned into more jobs, less inflation, more economic growth.

Not all of the commitments made here — the U.S.'s pledge to cut back oil imports, Japan's to reduce its trade surplus and West Germany's to expand its economy, are the ones that matter — will be kept to the last letter. Nor does this package of tit-for-tat deals add up to a cure-all for our economic ills.

No matter. The Group of Seven did all that they came here to do. They did, in fact, a great deal more than they, or anyone else, expected. Just possibly, Bonn will turn out to be the first step back out of the abyss into which the west has fallen ever since we realized we will never again have enough oil, and might have, for a long, long time, too much unemployment and too much inflation.

President Jimmy Carter talks to Trudeau at Bonn summit meeting.

Avoided Failures

To have avoided failure, which once seemed likely, was the group's first accomplishment. The benefits of non-failure were best described, at the closing press conference, by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. "For decision to be made to invest and to produce, we must move to confidence from uncertainty, from this uncertainty which has so undermined morale in the world." Just by demonstrating that they could agree to agree, the Bonn leaders sent a message to businessmen that the future is worth investing in.

Next, the group seized hold of the slogan of "world interdependence," and injected some substance into it. "We all were conscious," said Trudeau, "that the meshing of our economies in an interdependent world had not produced the kind of prosperity we had hoped for. We realized that it would not be enough for us to come out with general statements of intentions, but that we had to make real commitments."

Around the table at the Palais Schaumburg each of the seven leaders threw a chip into the common pot. West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, for example, pledged tax cuts in September that would boost West Germany's economic growth by one-third above its present rate. Japan promised to hold its exports to last year's level and to buy $4 billion worth of "emergency" imports. Canada's chip, because no more was asked of us, was a small one — a pledge of "uninterrupted" supplies of uranium for the West German and Japanese nuclear power programs.

Once fulfilled, these commitments will leave the world's economy healthier, if still troubled. Reduced U.S. oil imports, for example (the U.S. congress has yet to dispose of President Carter's year-old program) will stabilize world currencies. An expanded West German economy and a less-protectionist Japan will open new markets for everyone else. Each country will benefit from the actions of the others, and by benefitting itself will in turn be better able to benefit the others.

Lastly, the seven leaders showed that they could be inventive as well as active. When, during lunch on the first day, Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda raised the subject of terrorism, Trudeau butted in to declare, "why don't we do something about it, instead of just talking?" A day later, the group had accepted a Canadian-drafted pledge to ban all flights to and from countries which provide shelter for hijacked planes.

The annual summit of the seven is beginning to take on a permanent shape. Begun in France three years ago as an informal think tank for western leaders (Canada, then, was excluded), the gatherings now have evolved into a problem-solving institution. One illustration is the ability of the group to deal with items outside its prepared agenda — like hijacking, and, perhaps at later meetings, as mentioned by Trudeau, topics like disarmament and southern Africa. Another illustration is that the Bonn gathering for the first time created a mechanism to measure its own progress — a meeting of representatives of the seven countries to be held later this year.

Don't Raise Hopes

The hopes for this, or for later summits (Japan will host the next one) shouldn't be raised too high. What the heads of government have promised to do, their own parliaments and political constituencies back home may later undo. As one bow to the imperatives of national self-interest, the group agreed, at the insistence of France, to soften a reference in the final communique to "uniform application" of international rules prohibiting non-tariff barriers to trade into a pledge only to "move in that direction as soon as possible."

Yet the seven still did enough. As leaders of countries which together account for almost half the world's trade and for more than half the world's total economic output, Carter, Schmidt, Fukuda, Giscard d'Estaing, Trudeau, James Callaghan of Britain and Julio Andreotti of Italy, have sent a message from this sleepy Rhineland town that we may indeed be able to make it with less oil, and with less inflation and unemployment. Few, two days ago, expected that the seven could scale that high.

Burr Under Saddle

Lately there has been some criticism about the MLA from Esquimalt, Lyle Kahl. It seems that Mr. Kahl has been accused of a number of things, including making a questionable gesture to the chairman of a parliamentary committee. Some readers have called in to question Mr. Kahl's ability as an MLA and while I might be accused of bias, I nevertheless feel that I am in a unique position to make a judgement in this matter.

Mr. Kahl is outspoken, sometimes abrasive and always relentless in the pursuit of his constituents' interests. When he wants something out of a ministry for his constituency, he is like the proverbial "burr under the saddle" until he is satisfied. His colleagues are never in doubt as to what his opinions are and he speaks in the House with considerable force on most important issues.

While it is true that Mr. Kahl may sometimes overlook the niceties of upper middle class social behaviour in making his presentation, the government is never uncertain as to the needs and wishes of his constituents.

I should think that these qualities are just what one looks for in an MLA. — K. Rafe Mair, Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

Wanna Buy Ticket?

There was a time when most of the lotteries in North America were run by the Mob. Long in the business of selling dreams — through illicit booze, narcotics, prostitution and bookmaking — organized crime was quick to realize that enormous profits could be made from the "numbers" racket. Selling people a slim chance to make a lot of money was lucrative business.

Governments changed all that, following a sort of "if you can't fight 'em, join 'em" philosophy, a number of U.S. governments went directly into the lottery business and Canada's federal government changed the criminal code to make lotteries for charitable purposes a respectable part of our everyday lives.

At first the emphasis was on private enterprise. Churches, service clubs, sports organizations, even some political parties used lotteries as a means of raising funds. The moral qualms some people had were stifled. After all, were lotteries any worse than bingo?

It didn't take governments long to want a piece of the action. It didn't take the politicians long to realize that here was the ultimate form of taxation. Voluntary taxation. Imagine, people lining up to pay the government money, and not complaining about it! There was no need for unpopular increases in general taxation to finance physical fitness or cultural achievement when people were eager to buy taxation tickets.

The argument that the lottery dream might be more attractive to the poor was dismissed. After all, what could be wrong with a system that had worked so well elsewhere. Australia was a shining example. Imagine, getting the working people of New South Wales to finance a multi-million dollar opera house!

But history has an intriguing tendency to move in circles. One of the features organized crime's involvement in the lottery business was the territorial battles that used to take place. The efforts of one "family" to move in on another's territory, and the ensuing "wars" have become part of the folklore of North America.

Now Canada has its own delightful version of the Hollywood stereotype. Perhaps you saw the film ... The Ottawa "family", to finance a big operation in the East, moves in on the territory held by the ten regional families. There are protests, but the big boys have the muscle, and promise that their involvement will end after the important Montreal operation is over.

An uneasy peace results. The profits are still enormous — $60 million in collections in British Columbia last year — or $33 from every person over the age of 14! The regional families console themselves about the rakeoff to the boys in Ottawa, after all, it is temporary.

But then the big boss, the capo di capos in Mafia parlance, breaks the truce. The Ottawa family has found the profits too enticing. His financial consiglieres, renowned for his streetfighting abilities, explains. Ottawa wants to keep "a piece of the action."

Will the Ottawa mob get away with it? British Columbia's interests are in firm hands. We are being defended in classic style. Godmother Grace is in charge. Her "soldiers" are defending the western mob's territory. Her numbers runners are ordered not to deal with the Ottawa mob. She calls for a meeting of the regional families to discuss strategy.

Who will win? Stay tuned for the next exciting instalment. Maybe one side or the other will come up with the right "hit men" and British Columbia will have its own political version of the St. Valentine's Day Massacre. — Gerry Kristianson, 5055 Catalina Terrace.

Double Standard

The best way to educate the public about alcohol is for the government to stop selling alcohol and making a profit from it. How can the public reconcile the government expecting them to obey the laws, while concurrently making a profit from a commodity which enables, encourages and forces them to break it?

It is not illegal to be an alcohol addict because it is legal to buy alcohol. But it is illegal to drive while drinking. Alcoholics and others do drive and drink, however, and cause much suffering to themselves and the rest of us. Drinking people are unable to think clearly or wisely when they are imbibing or they would not drive and drink in the first place. Even so, how can they reconcile the opposing laws surrounding alcohol?

People can get drunk in certain places and not in others. Men can beat up their wives and children at home, but not another man in a public place. It is illegal to commit any crime and use the excuse that you were under the influence of alcohol, a legal drink, bought at a legal business outlet, which just happens to be operated by a legal pusher, the government of the country. It is like handing people a loaded gun and telling them to have lots of fun shooting at anything they like, but if they should happen to hit anything, it will then become illegal.

People will always drink, but the government, if it doesn't want to be ridiculed off this planet, had better get out of the double standard of encouraging and profiting from people's agony, while at the same time legislating what types of agony are legal. It is like pushing people to the end of their endurance, making them scream "Enough, enough," and then telling them to smile. When a smile has to be ordered, it ceases to exist. The very essence of a smile is a natural joy. And natural joy does not have anything in common with alcohol. — Joan Bittorf, 1073 Davie Street.

Thanks, Race Fans

To the patrons of the Sandown race track who so generously participated in the prize draw held in conjunction with the charity celebrity race last Saturday, I wish to express the sincere appreciation of all the children at this hospital who will benefit directly from the funds raised.

In particular, I would like to thank Jim Keeling and the officials at the Sandown race track and most especially, the brave drivers who participated in the celebrity race. They were: Jack Short from the B.C. Racing Commission; Ken Dobson, CFAX radio; Paul Carlson, CHEK-TV; and Mike Woodman, CJVI radio.

The Queen Alexandra Hospital for Children depends on donations and bequests to provide the extra necessities for the children which are not provided through government funding. — George O. Thomas, Administrator, Queen Alexandra Hospital for Children.

Discount Coupons

Recently a merchandising expert was way off base when he estimated that the average household received discount coupons to the value of about $40 per year.

In the last four weeks we have received coupons in four envelopes, in an unsolicited magazine, in a flyer, in my grocery bags, printed on grocery boxes and included with samples of soap and coffee. The face values of the discount coupons totals $22.93 and as this continues with monotonous regularity, we must average $275.16 per year.

Most coupons I discard, either because they are for products we never use or because, even with a coupon, the product is higher in price than comparable ones.

Informative advertising is an acceptable cost of business but promotional devies such as discount coupons and lotteries for cash prizes, cars, holidays, etc., are inflationary adjuncts that are most unacceptable.

The farcical game of hiking prices then handing out coupons to kid consumers that they are getting a bargain is a costly game that should stop, because in the final analysis it is the consumer who pays for all goods and services, for the coupons and the extra bookkeeping involved.

Simple lotteries are honest, in that those who choose to gamble are fully aware that their chances of winning are minimal, but it is immoral to force those who do not believe in gambling to share the cost of lotteries promoting businesses. Such lotteries prove that prices paid by consumers were higher than necessary thus generating excess profits to be squandered on games of chance.

The growing popularity of cheap, good quality, nameless brands of merchandise is giving the business world a simple message: that Canadian consumers are deeply impressed by those who are making a genuine effort to halt inflation by cutting out wasteful procedures. — Ruby A. Pearson, 2085 Avondale Road.

Good Luck, Grace

I have had my fill of the negative newspaper articles and snide remarks about certain advertising promotions of our minister of tourism, Grace McCarthy. Tourism is a billion dollar industry in British Columbia and as it goes, so goes the economy of this province and in particular, this fair city of ours, Victoria. For the benefit of those ill-informed negative types, tourism has kept Victoria in the black for the last two years. With decentralization of the civil service, Victoria will become more and more dependent on tourism for its existence. We cannot take for granted the tourist will always come to Victoria or British Columbia.

The leisure time industry is becoming highly competitive with hundreds of other states, provinces, cities and countries trying to capture as big a slice of this market as they can. For British Columbia to maintain its position in this market it will take innovative, creative and well-organized promotions such as what Mrs. McCarthy's department is doing.

If one thinks he or she should be able to see or measure the success of any individual promotion such as the smile campaign or the Captain Cook celebrations, he simply does not understand what advertising does and how it works.

Good luck, Mrs. McCarthy; in spite of the few negative types your efforts will succeed in helping British Columbia enjoy another successful year in tourism and I feel most British Columbia people will agree with me. — George Devlin, 1189 Highrock Place.

'Give the Admirals All the Ships They Want'

By HENRY FAIRLIE

(Fairlie is a British Journalist now living in the U.S. He wrote this for the Washington Post.)

I presume that they will change in such years as are left to me, but if I had to utter my last words this day they would be in the grand manner: "Look to the navy."

Napoleon created a superb elite in the Imperial Guard, until it broke into a rabble at Waterloo. For a short time in the 1950s, the Strategic Air Command was an impressively elite force, but 10 years later I visited a SAC base in the South and its day was over. The missiles had replaced them.

This is exactly why navies are aristocrats and not mere elites. Elites are replaceable, aristocrats are irreplaceable.

No navy of any nation is ever replaced, for the simple reason that you need a boat to go to sea. Tanks can ride across land as well as horses, thus destroying the aristocracy of the cavalry. You can send anything into the air, as SAC all too quickly found out. But if you want to go to sea, you need a ship, and therefore you also need sailors.

The U.S. Navy has been in the news lately. People have been criticizing it, trying to reduce its size. Some have seemed to want to sink it, even before the Russian submarines have had a go. Men used to be keelhauled for less than that, or flogged around the fleet, lashed by their wrists to a capstan bar.

If I were the secretary of defence, I would give the admirals all the ships they want. Any country that is worth its salts, if I may be allowed the expression, ought to have lots of admirals, and the admirals ought to have lots of boats.

At the recent North Atlantic Treaty Organization meetings in Washington, the U.S. Navy was able to assure the Europeans that, in the event of a Russian land attack on the continent, it would be able to carry the necessary reinforcements and supplies across the Atlantic. Can this be true, with all those Russian submarines lurking under the sea, bristling with weapons?

I went to my naval adviser, who gruffly answered my query. "I might not have said that five years ago. But we can keep the Atlantic sea lanes open now. No doubt at a terrible cost, but we can get the stuff across."

I saluted as I left. There is something about sailors that makes me take their word.

When I was in Annapolis a few weeks ago, the naval cadets (men and women) were still all over the place. Why do people in the navy always look so much more handsome and glamorous than those in any other of the services? In short, so ship-shape? The Waves look delicious in their uniforms, as do the Wrens in my own country. ("Wrens" is an adaptation from the initials of the Women's Royal Naval Service, but "Waves" seems merely to have been a delightful invention.) "I am the captain of the Pinafore; And a right good captain, too!" captures the jaunty spirit of all naval persons.

Natural aristocrats of the armed forces that can never be replaced?

I do not think that it is because I come from an island nation whose greatness was built on the wooden hulls of its ships — "hearts of oak are our ships, hearts of oak are our men" — that I feel this excitement not only at the Royal Navy but at the navies of all the nations that have them.

I have noticed that my feeling is shared by most people in all countries who are not warped by their loyalty to some regiment in the army or squadron in the air force. There must be other and less insular reasons.

The simplest may be that most people enjoy looking at boats, and that warships are as satisfying to look at as any others. Armies may have their parades and air forces their fly pasts, but they are as nothing to warships when they sail in line ahead. A military tattoo is fine, but nothing to a naval review.

A very suave and distinguished reporter of the BBC was once so carried away when George V was reviewing his fleet that he drank too much, and as he slowly slid to his knees while he was broadcasting, his view of the navy was gradually blocked by the ship's rail where he had been standing. Before the BBC could cut him off the air, he was exclaiming into the microphone: "My God! The ships are going down. Oh my God! The navy is sinking."

Then there is the mystery of the oceans that a ship has sailed and the ports where it has been. "A girl in every port" is a catch-phrase in a way that "a girl on every air base" could never be.

Because sailors lead different lives from us — lead them apart from us on the open seas for long periods — we willingly make legends of their exploits. All sailors are tellers of yarns, and we suspend our disbelief as we listen. The yarns are translated into legends, and the legends then into traditions, and this is one of the explanations of a navy's hold on us, that it is much richer in traditions than any other service.

At least it seems to be so. When an admiral protested against some innovation that Winston Churchill had ordered, on the ground that it was against traditions of the navy, Churchill sent back the admiral's memorandum with the impatient but robust scrawl: "The traditions of the navy? They are rum, sodomy, and the lash." One need hardly add that Churchill knew the navy very well, and that he was always its supporter in war and peace.

The tradition of the lash, when once known, is hard to forget.

When a sailor was flogged round the fleet at the time of the War of 1812, the sentence he received was usually between 350 and 500 lashes. After 25 or 30 lashes, the prisoner was rowed to another ship, where the same number were laid across his back, and so in turn to another and then another, until the punishment had been carried out, assuming the wretch was still alive. No wonder we stand in awe of such a tradition!

It is not surprising that navies are more traditional and conservative than other services. In spite of the number and sophistication of new weapons, a navy does today very much what navies have always done, whereas the functions of the army, and even of so young a service as the air force, have for years been constantly in a process of change.

Moreover, the basic fact of naval life — that sailors are cooped together in a confined space — has not altered since the day of Nelson. A code is needed to enable them to coexist, and rather than have to enforce it all the time, it is natural that it should be reinforced by tradition. Since we miss tradition in our society, we are grateful to the navy as an exemplar of it.

That seafaring and therefore the navy are deep in our consciousness is shown by the way in which we have raided their vocabulary for our own speech. Get under way . . . full speed ahead . . . batten down the hatches . . . bear down on . . . sail close to the wind . . . weigh anchor . . . run the gauntlet . . . make way . . . make leeway . . . sail before the wind . . . run a tight ship . . . the cut of the jib: all of these and many more tell us how struck we have been by the imagery of the sea and of ships, and one of the reasons of course is that nautical language is itself so rich.

We can even still respond to the old naval commands — all hands ahoy! . . . up all hammocks! . . . clear lower deck! . . . hand up top-gallant and royal yards! . . . sway out the chains! . . . topmen aloft sway away! — just as the boatswain's yell was taken up by his mates. The sea is in us as its sound stays in the shell.

So I would let the admirals have as many ships as they want, so that they may shoot ballast, rig for diving, heave in together, break bulk, blow the vents, clap on ratlines, steam in line of bearing, put the rudder hard over, to their hearts' content, until at last they go happily to Davy Jones' locker. —

I know of only one difference between the attitudes of the British and the Americans.

The army and the navy in Britain have always recruited many of their officers from the sons and even daughters of the aristocracy. They are the professions of gentlemen, which still keep their prestige, even among the intellectuals, and so can recruit also from among the very able.

In America this is far less true, so that the armed services have difficulty in peace in maintaining their quality, although my impression is that they make a strenuous and effective effort to do so.

The American attitude has always seemed to me to be short-sighted. It is not merely that the armed forces should be kept in peak condition in peacetime, which is hard enough to do anyhow, but that it is surely better that their leaders should be of the highest intelligence and breadth of interests and culture. I do not regard my affection for the navy as a boy's romancing but as a sensible care for and interest in a service and its men on whom we depend, which I would extend to the army, only with less fancifulness.

So — stand by the mainsheet! Ahead both motors! Give her more rudder! And — never ship your oars. Which is as fine a bunch of nautical mixed metaphors as you will hear on deck any day.

There's New Hope for the Aged

By VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

Ten to 20 per cent of the elderly senile really do not suffer from dementia — progressive loss of memory and brain function — but from other conditions and diseases that could be treated if doctors only recognized them, a group of experts on aging agreed last week.

"The prospect of these doomed people today who could have been restored to useful life by appropriate evaluation and treatment is staggering and demands action," said Dr. Richard Besdine of Harvard Medical School and the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for the Aged in Roslindale, Mass.

Besdine was author of a draft report made by a six-member task force for discussion by the 30 specialists who attended a two-day Conference on Treatable Diseases in the Elderly at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

One of the largest single causes of false senility, it was agreed, is drug intoxication: that is, reactions to medications, among them tranquilizers, and among these the most common is Valium, the most widely used prescription drug.

Among treatable and often unspotted physical diseases that can cause brain dysfunction and mimic truly irreversible senility are heart disease, strokes, infections (including pneumonia), anemia, nerve disease, brain tumors and blood clots, kidney or liver failure, metabolic diseases such as diabetes or thyroid problems, nutritional deficiencies (sometimes caused by faulty diet), reactions to chemicals and alcoholism.

The discussions will be translated into recommendations in coming months. But there was general agreement to tell practising doctors that:

—There are indeed irreversible causes of "chronic brain syndrome" dementia, such as repeated blood vessel blockages and various brain and nerve diseases.

—They would be well advised, however, to spend more time thoroughly and aggressively examining and testing their confused or disoriented patients to exclude reversible causes.

—Deep psychological depression, too, can be classed as a common and often treatable, reversible cause of apparent senility.

It is "amazing," said one doctor attending the conference, how often even a heart attack can occur in silence with no outward physical sign but mental confusion.

"We're talking about a large group of underlying, unrecognized diseases that are usually improvable, often reversible and sometimes completely curable," Besdine said.

To say 10 to 20 per cent of the supposedly senile have potentially reversible causes does not mean other forms of senility shouldn't be treated too, said Dr. Robert Butler, director of the National Institute on Aging.

"In all cases," he said, "the earlier the treatment, the better. The brain doesn't do very well when it is ignored over a long period of time."

Dementia is not a reason "for locking up the patient and throwing away the key," said Dr. Carl Eisdorfer, University of Washington psychiatry head.

The treatment may sometimes be as simple as withdrawing a drug or giving a drug. But often, said conferees, it must mean finding family or other "societal support" for the patient. Doctors and other health workers must themselves get out of their offices into patients' homes before they can understand their problems.

"People fear few things more than losing their minds and being 'put away' in a nursing home," said another National Institute on Aging report. Yet too many conditions are "mislabelled as 'senility'" simply because the patient is old, it said.

Mounties Have All the Jobs

By GARY LAUTENS

A Toronto police sergeant has admitted posing as a photographer for the Toronto Sun while taking pictures of Union of Injured Workers members attending a court hearing.

How anyone could be taken in by the impersonation is a mystery.

First of all, the officer was wearing a necktie, suit and other formal haberdashery, which no photographer in his right mind would be caught in during daylight hours.

Anyone who has been around a newspaper office for longer than 12 minutes knows that the men and women of the photography department may wear dungarees, safari suits, overalls, even a bikini with a daffodil stuck in the waistband — but no business suit and necktie.

Even more conclusive, any observer should have realized it was no Sun photographer when the man in question took his pictures without asking union members to unbutton their shirts, perform a revealing cartwheel, or show just the first six inches of cleavage.

What earthly use would the Toronto Sun have for a photograph of a person fully clothed?

However, all that is really just a side issue.

The important thing to come out of the development is the news that undercover police officers are now infiltrating the media as photo-journalists.

In recent months, we've learned the Mounties have undercover agents working in an assortment of occupations.

They sometimes work as mail carriers, postal sorters, civil disobedience leaders, university students, burglars, barn-burners, telephone operators, income tax clerks, medical assistants, and an assortment of other occupations.

No line of work seems beyond them and the bulge in the elevator repairman's overalls may very well be a badge, not just a sharp adam's apple.

Naturally, the latest revelation started me thinking and that's when the cranial 60-watter flashed on.

Does Canada realy have a serious unemployment problem, as the statistics of 900,000-plus jobless indicate, or is what we have a classic case of police over-achievement?

In short, do police undercover agents have all the jobs?

Of course law officers must keep an eye out for mischief, but it seems unfair they should hold down so many employment possibilities. Besides, they have an edge with the personnel manager.

If some bright young fellow of 28 with a master's degree in nuclear physics, a knowledge of eight or nine languages (including Russian) and enough accounting skills to run a small firm applies for the job of maintenance man in the building with the medical files, he is going to have a head start over the other applicants, especially if his letter of recommendation is signed by the justice minister and comes with orders to swallow same after reading.

Multiply that by the number of undercover police officers we apparently have in Canada and it's easy to see why some Canadians with more modest talents can't get work.

It may explain another phenomenon of our generation: the drop in the quality of workmanship.

While an undercover agent may be super with a judo chop or the drinking glass against the office wall, his heart is not really set on sorting letters, or getting the arthritis cases filed under A.

Even James Bond, if hired as a parking lot attendant across from the Bulgarian embassy, is apt to take a pillar out fetching the family Chev while listening on his wrist radio to transmissions from a bugged martini at the ambassador's annual garden party. After all, 007 is human, too, and it's difficult doing two things at once.

Besides, the Malibu gear shift is tricky for someone accustomed to Aston Martins and supercharged Jags.

Yes, my theory on why Canadian workmanship has gone down and unemployment up makes sense. However, there is a good side to it, too.

In the event of trouble at the office, it's comforting to know you can probably turn to the charlady for help, and he scored 98.5 on the last pistol test at the police range.

MAY WE 'TOOT OUR HORN'
while introducing our new chairman. As a matter of fact a bit of a blast would be appropriate BECAUSE.....

last year alone, Trust Companies solved the mortgage problems of 56% of all Canadians purchasing homes. Act Saves Travellers $50,000

The new Travel Agents Registration Act has prevented losses of about $50,000 to the travelling public in the last five months, says registrar of travel agents Alec Burden.

Under the next act, which came into effect Feb. 21, travellers can claim for reimbursement against a $210,000 travel insurance fund. Monday for the fund came from agents and tour wholesalers who each made an initial contribution of $300 when they registered under the new act. In addition, they had to pay a $100 registration fee.

Burden said many people have not yet received their reimbursements because the travel assurance board will not be meeting until next week to screen them. He said there should be no problem with the repayments as long as complaints are properly documented.

Burden's job was created by the act after a number of agencies or tour wholesalers failed, leaving travellers out of pocket.

Burden said that 537 companies have been registered, a task all by itself because nothing like this was ever done before.

He said the legislation is helping keep undesirable travel agents out of the industry because personal history records are kept on all company principals.

Wine Art Popular Draw

More than 200 entries are expected in the home winemaking competition at the Saanichton Fall Fair Sept. 2-4.

The section is sponsored by the three amateur winemakers' clubs — the Victoria Winemakers's Guild, South Vancouver Island Winemakers and the Saanich Sommeliers.

In the last three years, more than half the entries have come from winemakers who are not connected with clubs.

The object of the event is to provide a competitive forum that will encourage home winemakers to improve the quality of their produce.

Winemakers wishing to enter the competition may obtain entry forms at winemaker supply stores or by phoning 652-3325 or 477-2154.

Battles Seen For Transit Act

The names of Mayor Mike Young and Ald. Bill Tindall have been put forward by Victoria council for possible designation by the provincial government as regional transit commissioners.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis plans to appoint a number of commissioners to help implement his new B.C. Urban Transit Authority Act.

The act provides for cost sharing of B.C. Hydro transit services — a concept city council is strongly opposed to.

Young and Tindall were nominated for Curtis' committee although Ald. John Hayes at first objected, saying he thought Victoria should protest the transit act by not participating.

Hayes withdrew his objection, however, after Young said: "There are certainly aspects in this bill that I find repugnant, but I don't think the way to deal with it is to hide your head in the sand."

Ald. Bob Wright agreed.

"We have to fight (the bill) at all levels — at the regional level, at the local level and at the committee level. There's going to be a lot of battles."

Calling All Kids

Victoria's supervised playground program is underway for another summer.

Ald. Robin Blencoe, council's parks committee chairman, said so far 593 children between the ages of 5 and 11 years have registered for the course.

Last year about 450 children enrolled.

The program will run until Aug. 11 and is free.

Blencoe said the playground activities involve games, trips to the library, visits from Victoria policemen and lectures by university students on environmental conservation.

Parents wishing to involve their children in the supervised programs should contact city hall.

Bawlf Reverses on Ship Probe

Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf reversed course Tuesday on his previously-announced investigation into the grounding and subsequent destruction of the provincially-owned schooner Freelance last month off Panama.

Bawlf said June 29 the government was launching an investigation into the events surrounding the accident and that an experienced mariner, not involved in the incident, would be at the helm of the investigation.

But the minister said Tuesday the government will not be carrying out its own, independent investigation.

Instead, Bawlf said the government would rely on the Quest Star Society — the group in charge of the Freelance when it hit a reef on Jupe 13 — to investigate the accident.

The society has started its own investigation, headed by society member Capt. Arthur McPhee of Sechelt. Bawlf said the society's report is expected to be finished shortly.

The minister did not respond when asked if he felt it was proper that Quest Star should be given the responsibility to investigate itself.

Statements made the by the crew of the 30-metre, gaff-rigged schooner indicate the Freelance was kilometres off course when it struck a reef off the San Blas Islands group in the Caribbean Sea.

The 70-year-old vessel was on its way here from Antigua where it was purchased for $58,000 and was equipped with $20,000 in equipment.

Bawlf said the ship was bought to commemorate the Captain Cook bicentennial and was to be used as a training vessel.

Not Guilty: Mine Pickets

CASTLEGAR (CP) — Three Genelle residents pleaded not guilty to charges of intimidation when they appeared in provincial court in this southeastern British Columbia community on Tuesday.

Raymond McGregor, Eric Taylor and Robert Lee were charged following an incident at nearby China Creek July 10 in which RCMP asked a number of persons to move from an access road being used by a uranium consulting firm.

The road led to a drilling site in the China Creek watershed. Residents of the area oppose the uranium drilling because they believe it will lead to contamination of their water supply.

The case was adjourned to Aug. 1.

Inquest Ordered

NANAIMO. (CP) — Coroner Dr. Mike Smart has ordered an inquest into the death of Dennis Maze, 41, of Gabriola Island, who died Sunday while in an RCMP cell here.

Police said Maze, who had been arrested on a bench warrant on an impaired driving charge, was believed to have died of natural causes.

Fall Fatal

NANAIMO (CP) — David Ashby, 52, of Nanaimo, was killed Monday in an industrial accident at the Harmac mill south of here.

RCMP said Ashby broke through the roof of the mud filter building while trying to remove a lime buildup from the roof and fell about eight metres, landing on a concrete floor.

Officer Cleared

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Burnaby RCMP drug officer was acquitted Monday in provincial court of assault causing bodily harm.

Constable Kenneth Charles Gates, 26, a seven-year member of the force, was accused of breaking the arm of Therese Pare, 22, during an arrest after she refused to stop pulling his hair.

Aging Expert Dies

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)— Margaret Briault, a Vancouver community worker who served as a specialist on aging and personal bereavement with the British Columbia Memorial Society, has died at the age of 67.

Paper Burns

BURNABY (CP) — Firemen are dousing tons of smouldering bales of paper today after a fire swept through a storage yard at the Belkin Paper Box plant in this Vancouver suburb Tuesday.

A fire department spokesman says the three-alarm blaze started Tuesday afternoon in a four-acre yard where low-grade recycled paper is delivered and stored for processing.

About 25 firemen managed to contain the blaze to a two-acre area by pouring hundreds of thousands of gallons of water on bales stacked about four metres high. The paper plant nearby was not threatened.

Arson is not suspected, he said. No estimate of damage is yet available.

Senate Backs Snail Darter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate Tuesday refused to sacrifice the snail darter in order to allow completion of a $116 million Tennessee dam.

CASTLEGAR (CP) — The British Columbia School Trustees Association Tuesday served 72-hour lockout notice on about 240 non-teaching employees in four school districts and at one college in the West Kootenay in southeastern B.C.

The association served notice on workers in Trail, Nelson, Castlegar and Grand Forks school districts and at Selkirk College in Castlegar.

The workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), have been without a contract since the end of June in Trail, Nelson and Castlegar school districts.

Munroe Sees No 'Boss' Bias

VANCOUVER (CP) — Don Munroe, the new chairman of the British Columbia Labor Relations Board, said Tuesday he is surprised that he is being identified as a management man.

He said in an interview that he thinks he has been neutral in his last three years as LRB vice-chairman and will be able to demonstrate that neutrality when he takes over the top job at the end of this month.

The criticism — tempered with the hope that it is unfounded — came from Dave MacIntyre, B.C. Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer, who said Munroe has served as management appointee to arbitration boards.

"Paul Weiler (former LRB chairman) came into the labor scene as a neutral," MacIntyre said. "Both management and labor knew him as a neutral.

"I don't know of too much criticism since he (Munroe) has been on the board, except that if you come from management or you come from labor you're identified with them."

Victims of Crimes Share $79,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — Several lifetime pensions and a total of $78,777 in lump sums were awarded to crime victims during June, The Workers' Compensation Board reported Monday.

A woman injured in an armed robbery received the largest amount, a total of $15,000 in awards.

The widow and three children of a man stabbed to death in his Prince George home were awarded $7,500 and a $355-a-month pension. The widow of a Victoria man who died from bronchitis arising from being paralysed in a shooting two years ago is to get $1,141 lump sum and a $377-a-month pension.

A Keremeos man who received brain damage in a beating by two men was awarded $7,500 and a pension of $390 a month.

The only child who survived when a Delta man beat his wife and three children and then set fire to the home was awarded a monthly pension of $65 until she is 18 years old.

Several awards also were made to victims of purse snatchings, beer parlor attacks and rape victims. Under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act, anyone who is a victim of crime in B.C. may apply for compensation.

Five Get Bail in Pot Bust

Five men were granted bail and three men were detained in custody in provincial court Tuesday in the wake of Canada's biggest-ever marijuana seizure.

Another seven persons are awaiting bail hearings next week.

All 15 men are accused of conspiracy to import marijuana, a Criminal Code offence which carries a maximum sentence of life imprisonment and a minimum of seven years in prison.

RCMP, assisted by Canadian Armed Forces personnel, arrested the 15 at an isolated cove near Tofino Saturday and seized 439 bales of Colombian marijuana weighing 13 tons. The total, based on a wholesale value of $800 a pound, was worth $20.8 million. Police earlier estimated they had seized as much as 18 tons worth $28 million.

Processing of the first of the accused to appear before Judge Fred Green took close to four hours.

The accused men, represented by five Vancouver lawyers, were granted a no-publication order regarding details of the bail applications.

Granted bail were:

Allen Valenti, 36, of Qualicum Beach, $3,500 bail with one surety or cash. He must report twice weekly to Qualicum RCMP, remain in the counties of Victoria, Nanaimo and Vancouver and not change his address without the court's permission;

Melville Douglas Balfour, 31, of Lasqueti Island, north of Qualicum Beach, $3,000 bail with one surety or cash, and must remain in the counties of Victoria, Nanaimo and Vancouver;

Kevin Gerard Gushue, 26, of Surrey, $7,000 bail with one or two sureties or cash. He must remain in the counties of Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster, report twice weekly to the bail supervisor and not change his address without permission of the bail supervisor;

Terrance Gerard Trainor, 28, of Langley, $4,500 bail with one surety or cash. He must remain within the counties of Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster, report to the bail supervisor not less than twice per week and must maintain his present address.

Gordon Barlow Tait, 32, of North Vancouver, $10,000 bail with one surety or cash. He must report to the bail supervisor not less than twice weekly, must not change his address without the supervisor's permission and must remain in the counties of Victoria and Vancouver.

The five men who were granted bail must return to court July 25 for election of their trial method.

Denied bail and ordered detained in custody were:

Frederick MacIntosh Tait, 35, of North Vancouver, Patrick Joseph Murphy, 30, no fixed address, and Ronald Cecil Spurrell, 30, of Surrey. They will also appear in court July 25 for election of trial method.

Continued in custody at least until next week were:

Neil Maxwell Kennedy, 26, of Toronto, who chose trial by judge and jury and will have a bail hearing July 27;

Frederick Charles Scott, 27, of Vancouver, Frank Piersanti, 34, hometown not available, Garth Clarence Sexton, 27, of Vancouver, Edwin Floyd Terry, 28, a Canadian who once lived in Virginia, and John Mobley Doss, 28, a Canadian who once lived in Colorado, were remanded to July 25 for election of trial method and possible bail hearings.

Robert Sherman Miller, 33, of Vancouver was remanded to July 25 for election of trial method and bail hearing.

Defence counsel at Tuesday's proceedings were Lawrence Myers, Josiah Wood, Edward Seifred, Peter Hart and Sidney Simons. The Crown was represented by Gordon MacDonald of Victoria.

Third-Party Aid Hinted In Brewery Row

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A spokesman for employees currently embroiled in the B.C. brewery industry strike-lockout says he would welcome the intervention of a third party to get settlement talks going again.

Union business agent John Langley says it will likely take such a move to shake the current doldrum-like standoff in the dispute which has affected 1,200 brewery workers and idled at least 4,000 hotel industry employees.

He said he wished the provincial government or Labor Relations Board would get involved.

But Jim Matkin, B.C.'s deputy labor minister, said his department will only intervene if requested to do so by the parties. So far that hasn't happened.

Langley inferred that the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers is not going to make a request for third-party intervention.

"Sometimes such a move is taken as a sign of weakness," Langley said in an interview from Vancouver.

"But we are certainly not getting any weaker. If anything we are becoming more entrenched."

He said he would have to give some thought as to whether or not the union will ask for third-party intervention.

"There appears to be some reluctance on the part of the other side to meet."

Eric Harris, spokesman for the Brewery Employers Labor Relations Association (BELERA), said the companies don't seem too interested at this time in having a third party on the scene.

He said the breweries have made two offers to the employees which were said to be final and the companies don't see any responsibility for initiating additional action.

Harris said often in disputes such as this one something happens out of the blue and the whole thing is resolved.

"I don't think it is in anyone's interest to continue the dispute."

Five B.C. breweries - three in Greater Vancouver, one in Victoria and another in Creston - locked out their employees June 8 after union members at Carlings in Vancouver went on strike May 26.

Langley said the bargaining atmosphere might have been less stormy and the current confrontation avoided if the breweries hadn't suddenly decided in May to bargain jointly through BELERA. The union wanted to bargain with the breweries on an individual basis.

"They were trying to change the bargaining structure in mid-stream," he said.

Langley said the breweries' strategy is dictated from eastern Canada.

"It is an eastern decision made by eastern management which they are trying to impose on the West. But what is acceptable in the East may not be acceptable in the West.

"We like our autonomy."

Harris denied that the bargaining is being orchestrated from eastern Canada.

"I'm negotiating on behalf of B.C. companies . . . reflecting the B.C. climate and the situation here."

He said it is just coincidental that there happens to be a similar brewery industry dispute in Manitoba and Alberta.

"I don't even know what the full extent of the issues are in Manitoba."

Aside from the joint bargaining issue, the major stumbling block, according to the union, is the breweries' proposal for a cost-of-living allowance (COLA).

The brewery workers want a clause that would give them, on a quarterly basis, an additional cent an hour for every .4 increase in the Consumer Price Index.

The companies have offered a lump-sum COLA which would be paid in May, 1979, depending on the inflation rate during the previous four months. The provision would pay the workers an extra cent for every .3 increase in the Consumer Price Index but it would only trigger after a three-point increase in the cost of living.

Harris said the companies feel their offer is fair and equitable. The union doesn't think so.

Langley said the only way the union will back off on its COLA demand is if the federal government will give some assurances that it is going to somehow crack down on rising prices.

"We have to try and protect ourselves and this is the only way."

CP Rail Aware Of Sudden E&N Overflow

CP Rail's superintendent of passenger services in Vancouver says the passenger situation on the E & N line betwen Victoria and Courtenay is being monitored.

But Don Collings said no decision has been made on a request that an extra car be put on the run to handle passenger overloads.

The E & N Employees Committee sent a telegram to CP Rail's regional headquarters in Vancouver appealing for an additional passenger car to handle an overflow of traffic on the Victoria-to-Courtenay run.

Committee chairman John Cooper of Victoria said people are being refused service because the lone passenger car is operating at more than capacity.

About 200 passengers are being carried daily, he said. The car has only 68 seats.

Cooper said there are nine cars sitting unused in the CPR's Glen Yard in Montreal and suggested one of them should be sent here.

Collings said today there has been a surge in traffic since Premier Bill Bennett went on his celebrated promotional trip on the line two weeks ago.

A reduction in fares on July 1 contributed to the run's increased popularity.

He said three to 10 persons are being refused service each day because of an overflow. However, this morning 25 persons were turned away, a record number.

TANK EXPLODES

MANILA (AP) — A leaking gasoline tank exploded and sent flames roaring through a mining village, killing eight persons and injuring 17 others, authorities said. Officials said the blast killed five children in Talisay, and the hamlet was virtually destroyed in the resulting fire.

The United States Coast Guard's training barque Eagle will sail into the Inner Harbor Thursday if there is any favorable wind.

That's the word from Cmdr. Paul Welling, USCG, commanding officer of the vessel, to Lt.-Cmdr. Ray Pratte, USCG, information officer for the Eagle's west coast visit.

Pratte says Welling intends to sail from Race Rocks to the Ogden Point breakwater, berthing at the old Blackball terminal at 4 p.m.

"He is a sailor. He has told me numerous times if the wind is right he'll be sailing in and out," Pratte told the Times.

Pratte says although there was very little wind when the Eagle approached San Francisco, Welling was sailing her in order not to disappoint spectators.

"Stress to the people from him that he is going to do it if there's any way possible," Pratte said.

Aboard Eagle are 12 officers and 158 cadets from the academy — 18 of them female. This is the first year Eagle has had female cadets aboard.

Pratte said the U.S. coast guard was the first body in the U.S. to allow female cadets in their academy. The U.S. navy, army and air force have since followed suit.

Eagle is the seventh ship to bear that name in U.S. coast guard history. She was built in Hamburg, Germany, in 1936 as a training vessel for German naval cadets. Early in the Second World War she was converted to a cargo ship, transferring men and supplies between East Prussia and Germany proper. She received credit for downing three aircraft in combat.

A U.S. coast guard crew transferred her from Bremerhaven to the U.S. in 1946.

Pratte says Canadian naval reservists from the summer training prmgram at HMCS Malahat will be on hand to help Saturday when groups of senior citizens and the handicapped will be welcomed aboard between 9 and 11 a.m. The ship will also be open to the public 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

"I think the people will be very happy, both here and in Vancouver, when they visit her. She's a very important part of the coast guard tradition," Pratte said.

A full weekend of Captain Cook bicentennial festivities begins Thursday.

Along with the Eagle, two vessels of the Japanese Training Squadron — the cruiser-type training vessel Katori and the destroyer Aokumo, will arrive.

Officers of the visiting ships will attend a reception at city hall Friday and officer cadets will be guests at a reception in the Captain Cook bicentennial headquarters on the Causeway.

The visiting Japanese will also lay a wreath on the grave of a Japanese sailor, buried in the naval cemetary in Esquimalt.

On Saturday, the Eagle, along with at least nine B class boats taking part in the race from Vancouver to Seattle on July 29, will be in the Inner Harbor. The two Japanese vessels will be in the dockyard of CFB Esquimalt. All three ships will be open to the public from 1 to 4 p.m.

Musicians from the Canadian armed forces' Naden band will combine with their Japanese counterparts for a band concert in Beacon Hill Park's Cameron bandshell at 2 p.m.

A stag barbecue for the visitors will be held at 6 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park and an inshore regatta will take place in the Inner Harbor and off the Victoria coastline.

Barclay Warburton III of Newport, R.I., president of the American Sail Training Asspciation, said an inshore regatta customarily follows each biennial Tall Ships race in order to allow the participating cadets from various countries to make friends.

Using nine navy whalers, officer cadets from the three visiting ships and the Naval Officers Training Cantre Venture of CFB Esquimalt will compete at whaler pulling in the Inner Harbor from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

They will also competé in sailing races, starting from the Inner Harbor, in Cal 20s and Thunderbirds provided by local sailors. Owners will be aboard to give guidance but the boats will be sailed by the cadets.

At 1 p.m. a six-boat war canoe race will be staged, the competitors — 20 in each whaler — using paddles instead of oars.The finish line will be near the MV Coho's new berth in the Inner Harbor.

Immediately after the war canoe race the Victoria-based Lunenberg schooner Robertson II will arrange racing in the schooner's dories. Four-man crews are expected to take part, representing newspapers, television and radio stations.

The Japanese ships will also be open to special groups of elderly and handicapped citizens at 9 a.m. on

WELLING

Saturday and from 9 to 11 a.m. on the Sunday.

Again on the Sunday the three ships will be open to the public from 1 to 4 p.m., as well as the New Zealand frigate HMNZS Waikati, which will also be alongside in the dockyard.

At 8:30 p.m. that evening there will be a prizegiving on the steps of the legislative buildings. The crew of the navy's ketch HMCS Oriole will receive its award for winning the race from Honolulu to Victoria. Awards will be presented to the winners of the Saturday regatta.

A contingent of 300 Royal Canadian Sea Cadets and an 80-piece band from HMCS Quadra, the summer training centre on Goose Spit near Comox, will perform a Sunset Ceremony.

A 30-minure fireworks display in the Inner Harbor will begin at 10 p.m.

On July 24, the sailing vessels will leave for Vancouver at 6 am.

Among those expected to take part in the race from Vancouver to Seattle are Robinson II, Oriole, Lol Killam's Greybeard of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, Lady Frei and Lena Marie of San Francisco, Astral of Los Angeles, the 83-foot topsail schooner Norden from Seattle, Yankee Clipper, the Boy Scouts' 36-foot schooner from Seattle, and Adventuress, a 120-foot schooner which will have an all-girl crew of Girl Scouts.

Cmdr. Neil Norton, co-ordinator of naval events, says the ships will be escorted on either side by RCMP patrol boats, a naval tug and about 30 selected boats belonging to the Canadian Power Squadron.

Peaceful coexistence prevails between nude bathers and the clad variety at Prior Lake

A 'Lawbreaker' Grins and Bares It

Come and get me, chaps; I broke the law on Saturday.

I went nude bathing at Thetis Lake Park's infamous Prior Lake.

Nothing to it really. You just whip 'em off and watch out for the waterlillies.

I knew I was at Prior Lake (very much in the news lately and under threat of a heavy-handed clampdown by City Hall) because there was a sign reading "No Nude Bathing." And pinned on a tree at the top of the trail was a cigarette packet with the words "Sharon: Went to Nudist Club in Cobble Hill. Sandi."

So one or two were put off by the thought of the fully-clothed law stalking them through the bushes. But most stayed.

Now I realize I risk the wrath of one wife and the whole Women's Liberation Army in saying this but I'm afraid I arrived just a trifle late — from the point of view of getting artistic photographs, of course.

As I went down the trail a little hesitantly, I passed three or four couples (dressed again by now) on their way back up to their cars. That, I discovered when I reached the solitary float, was the last of the women bathers.

All that were left were five guys and a petition.

"You should have been here a bit earlier," one of the five said after I'd taken great risk to my clothes and camera by identifying myself. "There were about 30 or more down here then."

Most of them, they said, swam and sunbathed in the altogether. But this was no big deal.

"We're not hurting anybody," Paul Nelson pointed out. "We just come here to swim and lie in the sun and there should be somewhere you can do this if you want to."

Some people have been going to Prior Lake and other tiny backwaters of the park to swim in the nude for 20 years, he said. Last year there was no trouble and now suddenly there is.

When you look around at the tranquility of what is really no more than a pond edged with waterlillies and appreciate its remoteness (you need good instructions and patience to battle a rough gravel road to find it) you realize, as they say, that the whole thing is being blown out of proportion.

Headlines have attracted a few onlookers.

"There are some people, mainly elderly ones, who come and stand high on that rock up there and watch us," said Paul. "They are generally ignored. One guy with a dog drops by regularly. I think he really comes to look at the ladies. Yesterday he came on strong and said he was taking all our licence plate numbers to report us.

max low

"And a couple of young guys in a new sports car roared in for the first time today and said 'Okay, where's the action?' They'd come, they thought, to pick up chicks. But this isn't a sex trip at all.

"There are people who wear swim suits and people who don't. And there's peaceful co-existence between the two.

"We get all sorts of people. Today we had a family with two young daughters nine or 10, all swimming in the nude. And we often get a pregnant woman here and there. But everyone is happy and relaxed together."

Just as I was starting to feel a little more relaxed myself, Richard Creech told me quite politely that he wished I hadn't found it necessary to come.

So did I, I told him as I was hot and dry. But summer was a slack time for reporters and politicians, I explained. They had to find something to do. I think he understood.

"It shouldn't make headlines, but it does," said Richard a little sadly. "We don't want any fuss."

"No," Paul added with a grin. "For one thing it will get too bloody crowded."

Peace and tranquility at the side of Prior Lake has been somewhat disturbed since city hall cut a new trail down to the water's edge, fancied up the float, installed two toilets and then slapped up its "No Nude Bathing" sign a couple of weeks ago.

And so Paul and Richard and the others have drawn up their petition calling for an amendment to the existing bylaw forbidding nude bathing in (certain traditional areas of) Thetis Lake Park. The amendment would make swim wear optional. Already containing more than 100 signatures representing 95 per cent of the little lake's recent users, the petition is soon to be presented to city hall.

In the meantime, our fearless naked friends intend to carry on regardless.

"I'll swim in the nude here unless they pack me up in a paddy wagon and take me away — every time," threatened Richard.

So I found myself hot and nodding in agreement and just couldn't get out of it. My nude swim, that is.

"Sure, why not?" asked Paul. "How's that for a starting line for your column: 'I broke the law today.' A law that is a vestige of an archiac Victorian era.

"Then as soon as you go in, the paddy wagon will pull up," he chuckled.

But I was past the point of no return. So I stripped and flipped.

And I must say, though I kind of enjoyed the feeling of freedom, I did keep a close eye on the trail for the cops . . .

Tourist Flood Swamps City

The sold-out sign went up in Victoria hotels and motels at 6 p.m. Tuesday as tourists began arriving in numbers for the Captain Cook festival.

The Visitors Information Centre used its emergency housing program for the first time this summer, directing tourists to approved private homes for accommodation.

Even more visitors are arriving today and all 3,802 hotel and motel units in the Greater Victoria area were expected to be filled by 3 p.m.

"Thousands of people are arriving but it is all orderly and manageable," VIC housing committee chairman Ken King said.

"We have not had to get involved with school yards and things like that. We should be able to accommodate everyone in the approved housing."

Tuesday night, tourists were directed to Sooke, Sidney and some as far away as Duncan for accommodation.

In addition, there are 100 approved private homes in Victoria where visitors can rent rooms. After 6 p.m. a few hotel rooms may become available due to cancellations.

"People are staying longer than we expected and that is adding to the crowd," King said. "Everyone wants to stay as long as possible because there are so many things going on this week."

King was referring to the arrival of the tall ship, the Eagle, on Thursday and the regatta of sailing cadets on Saturday, climaxed Sunday by closing ceremonies and a fireworks display. The Eagle will arrive, with sails up at least as far as the breakwater, about 4 p.m. Thursday.

On the ferries, traffic flow was heavy Tuesday and waits were up to three hours at Tsawwassen.

"It peaked about 1 p.m. Tuesday," assistant traffic manager Bill Bouchard said. "We left 300 cars, which is a load-and-a-half."

Bouchard said those trying to avoid the rush should travel before 9 a.m. or after 7 p.m. The flow is much heavier from Tsawwassen to Swartz Bay than in the reverse direction.

During the first two weeks of July, he said, vehicle traffic was up 16 per cent over 1977 and passenger traffic was up 17 per cent. The Marguerite is travelling with full loads and passenger totals are up 30 per cent from last year.

Arrival of the visitors has local tourist officials heaving a sigh of relief.

After a brisk June, the tourist flow was below expectations during the first two weeks of July. Now the 1977 totals are expected to be greatly surpassed.

During the first two weeks of July there had been only about 14,000 enquiries at the VIC Causeway bureau, down from 15,658 in the corresponding period of 1977. Enquiries are increasing dramatically, however, as the Cook festival approaches.

In June, which had been a banner month in the city, there were 11,700 enquiries at the bureau, up from 10,248 the previous June.

Meanwhile, the crowds might have been higher this week except for warnings being circulated in Seattle about expected overcrowding in Victoria this week.

Several Saanich residents who protested to council's finance committee Tuesday night about hefty increases in property tax bills were advised by Mayor Mel Couvelier to take their complaints to the provincial government.

Couvelier noted that a restructuring of the assessment formula was largely responsible for the increased taxes in Saanich this year, and it is better for taxpayers to make their concerns known directly to the provincial cabinet.

If local politicians do so they are accused of headline-grabbing, he added.

The residents told council's finance committee that Saanich should have raised more of an outcry against the imposition of the new assessment formula, and some said aldermen were too preoccupied with lavish and unnecessary spending on recreation facilities which duplicate existing amenities in the area.

Fred and Eleanor Atkin, 4981 Wesley Road, said in their letter they objected to tax money being spent on such frills as tennis courts "when our street is so full of potholes it's almost impossible for two cars to meet."

Festival Balloons

Air Canada is sending a 70-foot-high balloon to Victoria Thursday as part of the Captain Cook festival.

The company has asked permission to tether the balloon on the lawn of The Empress to give rides to invited guests.

The balloon will remain tethered.

Air Canada has also applied to city council for permission to move the balloon to Beacon Hill Park Sunday. Council will decide Thursday morning.

Wind conditions will govern how many rides can be given, the company said. If weather conditions are favorable, the tethered balloon rides may be offered to the public before the weekend is over.

The balloon is a salute to the visit of the Tall Ship to the province and it will follow the Eagle to Vancouver on Monday.

The balloon folds down into a four-foot diameter bag and weighs only 150 pounds. When inflated the bag itself becomes 55 feet wide and 63 feet high.

Including the passenger cabin, the balloon stands 70 feet high.

Pilot is Wayne Metler of Kitchener, Ont., who will decide on flight feasibility.

After Victoria and Vancouver, the balloon goes to Edmonton for the Commonwealth Games.

Theatres, Union To Meet

A negotiating meeting has been set for Friday between the B.C. Projectionists Union and representatives of Odeon and Famous Players theatres in B.C.

The 113 projectionists last Friday rejected the companies' latest offer. The employees are in a legal position to strike, having served 72-hour strike notice more than a week ago.

Wages and job security have been reported as the key issues in the dispute.

Posting of Names Defended In Fight Against Shoplifting

A security firm involved in a campaign to fight shoplifting today defended its policy of posting the names of individuals it apprehends in local stores.

Larry Scott, director of operations for Can-Am Investigations Ltd., said his company began posting names after signs warning shoppers that store detectives were on duty failed to deter shoplifting.

"All we're trying to do is say (to potential shoplifters) 'Look, we're serious — we were hired to do a job and we're doing it.'"

Scott said his company was not out to embarrass those picked up on shoplifting charges.

"These signs are strictly to act as a deterent. We don't want to pick anyone up, we want to prevent the crime from happening."

He said shoplifting is a major problem in the Greater Victoria area and the cost of it is causing significant increases in the price of goods.

Scott made his statements in reply to concerns voiced Tuesday by Victoria Civil Liberties Association president Frank Preston.

Preston said his organization was concerned about the practice some stores have of posting the names of individuals apprehended for shoplifting.

"I'm sure that shoplifting is a serious problem in town . . . but individual rights have to be protected and we're concerned with that aspect of it," said Preston today.

He said his association was actively studying the situation.

Preston urged anyone with complaints about the matter to contact his association.

Festival Concert Change

A change in the program for Thursday night's concert in the Victoria International Festival series has been announced by artistic director J.J. Johannesen.

In place of violinist Ruggiero Ricci, the Philadelphia String Quartet will appear with famous clarinetist Gervase de Payer, performing Brahms' Clarinet Quintet in B minor.

The concert takes place at St.Michael's University School at 8 and the program also includes Yuri Mazurkevich with pianist William Aide performing the Brahms Violin Sonata No. 1 in G Major, and cellist Hakuro Mori with pianist Robin McCabe, also in a Brahms work.

Saturday's concert, also at St.Michael's at 8 p.m., will be the first of three dedicated to the more brilliant and beautiful works for the piano by the great virtuoso masters. This extravaganza program will present pianists William Aide of Canada, Americans Abbey Simon and Robin McCabe, and harpsichordist Harmon Lewis.

PLAY TONIGHT IN SQUARE

Making its bow to Victoria audiences tonight at 8:30 p.m. in Market Square, will be a new collective of local theatre artists in a play entitled Legends, written and directed by Jake Thomas.

Legends is based on and an interpretation of the tales of King Arthur and Merlin.

It will be portrayed through various theatrical modes of expression including dance with Ken Drouillard as dancer and choreographer; Ralph Cole, who has been been on stage with Kaleidoscope and the Four Seasons Musical Theatre, as musical director, and David Roundell, composer.

Legends will continue nightly at 8:30 until Sunday. Then from Tuesday through Sept.3 starting time will be 7 p.m. Ticket prices begin at $4 for adults with reductions for students, senior citizens and under 12-year-olds. Group and family rates are available and information and reservations can be obtained by calling 384-0912.

Prisoners Keep Eye On Exchange Treaty

OTTAWA (CP) — The subtleties of a treaty being ratified today by Canada and the United States would be lost on the average citizen—but they are being studied closely by United States killers in Canadian prisons, and by Canadian drug traffickers in United States prisons.

These are people who might benefit from the Canada United States Treaty for the Transfer of Citizens under Sentence.

It comes into force today, after a formal signing ceremony here, and it will affect 80 Canadians doing time in U.S. federal prisons and 230 Americans in Canadian federal prisons, as well as uncounted numbers in the provincial and state systems.

People such as Frank Cotroni, a Montreal Mobster doing time in Pennsylvania, and John Connearney, a Rhode Island prison escaper who killed a Montreal policeman in 1972, may find the treaty attractive because it offers a better chance at parole.

Controni is serving a double 15-year sentence imposed in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1975 on charges of conspiracy to smuggle about 20 pounds of cocaine into the U.S. from Mexico.

Parole on drug convictions in the U.S. is tied to the amount and value—in this case millions—of the seizure. In Canada, it is tied to the individual's record and the circumstances of the case.

Controni may be no better off in Canada than in the U.S. in this basis, but if transferred to a federal prison in Montreal, he would at least be close to his family.

Officials estimate that about one-quarter of the prisoners on both sides of the border are in for drug offences—mostly serious ones. The major difference the treaty will make to them is that transfer may mean a better break on parole, and for many Canada will be the obvious choice.

For killers, the U.S. may be more attractive. Canada's new 25-year mandatory minimum for first-degree murder means that Connearney won't get out of jail until late in the century. In the U.S., he might get a better break. At least he would be near home.

"Over half the people up here are in for crimes of violence," a U.S. official says. "There are a lot with long records.

"They know that prison conditions here aren't really that different than in the United States. They are looking at the parole possibilities, what's in it for them."

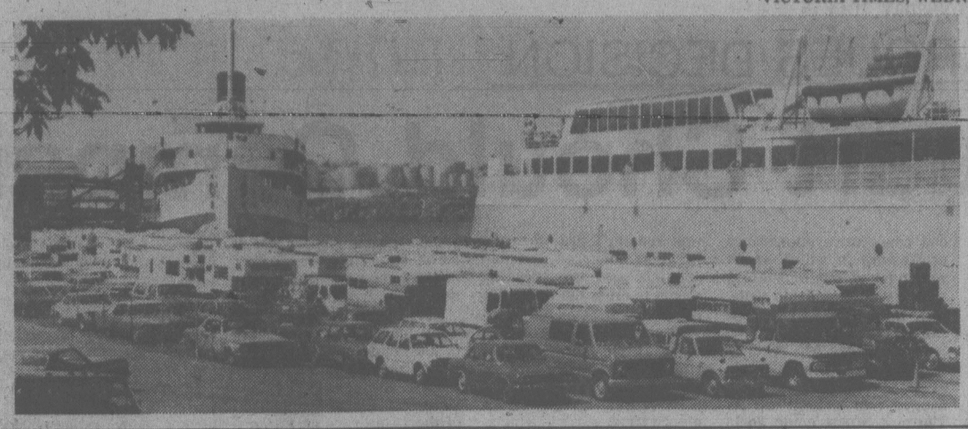
U.S. consuls are familiar with the U.S. population here because they must visit U.S. prisoners regularly. One says that about 25 per cent of the Americans in Canadian prisons are in for big-time drug smuggling, and may choose to stay here because of better chances of parole and other reasons.

One other reason is the comfort of some Canadian prisons, such as a medium-security institution at La Macaza, Que.

"There are a few Americans there and they would hesitate to go anywhere to a medium-security prison in the U.S. because it could be worse," a U.S. official said.

In Canada, anyone serving a sentence of two years or more goes to a federal prison. The rest go to provincial prisons. Under the treaty, at least six months must be left in the sentence and few applications from provincial prisoners are expected.

It's harder to get a profile of Canadians in the U.S. system, where the federal system probably holds far fewer than the state systems. No figures on the number of Canadians in state prisons are available. The Canadian embassy in Washington has little information on the subject, or apparent interest in it.



WAITING GAME is played daily by would-be travellers on MV Coho. More than 30 recreational and other vehicles were lined up in hot sun Tuesday afternoon to board vessel. (Bill Halkett photo).

Stuart Should Campaign in a Tank

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

It wouldn't surprise anyone if George Stuart showed up Thursday at Western Speedway driving a tank. At least he'd survive.

He didn't Tuesday night — for the second time in 20 days — and it cost him a victory in the second race of the International Drivers' Challenge series for superstocks.

The Campbell River driver was bumped out of first place on the final lap by Tacoma's Ron Eaton, who nicked him on turn two, forcing him to spin out.

Third race of the series is scheduled Thursday night at Western starting with time trials at 7.

Tuesday marked the second consecutive appearance at Western in which Stuart was pushed out of victory square via the collision route.

He was the victim of the same misfortune in the Victoria 100 NASCAR race on June 28 when Jimmy Insolo of Mission Hills, Calif., banged into him on lap 59. The best Stuart could do in that one was a recovery to third place while Insolo got the checkered flag.

Eaton was given the checkered Tuesday night before 3,381 fans who could hardly believe their eyes, but he lost the win moments later when an IDC committee docked him two placings for hitting Stuart and put him back to third.

That gave the victory to Victoria's Roy Haslam, who was running third when the incident occurred and had scooted past the spinning Stuart to cross the finish line behind Eaton.

Racing rules say that a driver, even if he is the victim of a foul, cannot be moved up in the field. The penalized driver can only be placed back.

Stuart thus finished second but he didn't stick around to elaborate on his misfortune. He left the infield immediately but one of his crew said simply that the incident was a "cheap shot."

Eaton disagreed.

"I had the brakes on at the time," the Tacoma driver said. "Stuart went into the turn high and he changed direction and tried to come down. There was no way I could miss him. There was a lot of oil on the track. I've never bumped a car intentionally in my life."

Eaton criticized Victoria's Tony Johnson, who was right in the middle when Stuart finally passed Eaton on turn four of the second-last lap. Until then Stuart spent most of the 75-lap race on Eaton's bumper.

But at that point Eaton was forced to go high on the track to get around Johnson while Stuart found an opening on the inside and had the lead firmly in hand going into the last lap.

"Johnson really worked me over," Eaton argued. "I just couldn't believe it."

The race committee did, though, penalizing Johnson two spots — from eighth to 10th — for failing to yield when Eaton tried to go by him.

Will Eaton return for Thursday's race?

"I don't know," he replied. "The crew is thinking of bagging the whole thing."

Haslam, appropriately, had little to say.

"It's called racing luck," he allowed. "We were in the right place at the right time. Other than that, I have no comment other than to say I wasn't happy with the way the car (a 1978 Camaro) handled."

He and his crew plan to change the front-end suspension for Thursday.

The victory moved Haslam past Eaton into first place in the series points standings. Although the totals won't be finalized until tonight, Haslam unofficially is about 30 points ahead of Eaton, who is now second.

It was not a happy night for Victoria's Roy Smith, making his first drive in a new '78 Camaro built by Aircraft Standards of Seattle. Ignition problems forced him to retire early. His crew plans to reset the timing for tomorrow night's race.

Smith and Haslam timed in fourth fastest in 17.01 seconds. The best time was logged by Victoria's Joe Musfelt, 16.75 in a '74 Camaro. Stuart, in a '76 Nova, was second in 16.79 while Eaton, in a '76 Ventura, was third at 16.82.

Barry Powers of Regina took the 25-lap "B" main and the "B" trophy dash. The "A" dash went to Eaton while Haslam took the fast heat and Brian Green of Prince George captured the slow heat.

A total of 30 cars timed in but at least four were left on the ferry dock in a four-hour lineup at Tsawwassen earlier Tuesday and failed to make it in time. Among them was pre-race favorite Don Dowdy of Yakima along with Reg Kennedy of Surrey.

Carl Fleet, brother of Western Speedway regular Ron Fleet, just made it across after hauling his '76 Camaro from Aurora, Ont., north of Toronto. Fleet is running fourth in the Ontario stock car series in which Western track record holder Earl Ross of Ailsa Craig, Ont., competes. Ross' record time here is 16.627 seconds for the four-tenths-mile oval.

Canada Should Form "Cheat Canada" Body

Ms. Iona Campagnolo,
Minister, Fitness and Sport,
Ottawa.

Dear Iona:

The Commonwealth Games are only two weeks away, yet it has come to my attention that not one penny of federal funds has gone into research and preparation for the most popular of all international sports events.

I refer, of course, to cheating.

Look around you, Iona. Cheating has become very big internationally. So many athletes are doing it the International Olympic Committee may recognize it as a sport and give it a logo of its own: a dope pusher rampant on a field of athletes holding up little urine sample bottles.

We cannot make the same mistake we made in international hockey. As a nation we must not be caught in the fraud gap. I urge you to move at once on the formation of a new national sports body: Cheat Canada.

It's not that Canadian athletes can't cheat. The potential has always been there. But without direction it can be a haphazard sort of thing. We're piddling around with little under-the-table pin money ploys as a substitute for scholarships while the rest of the world is out there cheating in actual competition.

On Sunday a Belgian cyclist named Michel Pollentier who'd won the 16th stage and the over-all leader's yellow jersey in the Tour de France was suspended for attempting to stiff the rules committee on dope control. On Monday, they hit Frenchman Antoine Guttierez with the same charge.

It seems they'd been caught trying to beat the urine test — a post-race ceremony, once restricted to horses, brought in when athletes discovered that a benny didn't necessarily have to be named Jack.

Athletes are required to fill little bottles immediately after competing. Thus equipped, doctors can make sure they competed with nothing in their veins stronger than the will to win.

The two cyclists thought they had a way to beat it.

Just before the race they did No. 1 and stored the urine in rubber bulbs, which they tucked under their shirts. When the time came to take the test they stepped into the booth, squeezed the bulb, and the old stuff ran down a tube taped along their arm and dripped into the bottle.

Damnit, Iona, that's not spur-of-the-moment cheating. It smacks of organization, not to mention a strong stomach.

Two men from two different countries, both using the same bulb-full-of-old-urine trick? And you say we're not falling behind?

Where are our urologists, stepping forward to offer their expertise on the finer points of hitting the bottle cleanly with the stuff from the tube?

Where are our golf pros, teaching our athletes the overlapping grip so a man can hold the bottle and conceal the tube with the same hand while innocently holding his zipper at the ready with the other?

Where are the scientists planning ahead, the laboratories on red-alert status to beat the Russians to the next logical step: the drug that won't show up in the urine test at all?

Must we always follow the leaders? Can we never produce first-class cheaters of our own?

You should have seen it coming. You were in Montreal for the Olympic Games. Remeber the Russian fencer? Boris Onischenko had wired his epee to register non-existant hits on the electronic scoreboard. He'd have gotten away with it, too, only he overloaded the thing and it lit up like a pinball machine while his opponent was standing two feet out of reach.

But he tried, Iona. He tried.

Can we do less?

Since only a crash program can save us now, I suggest you go straight to the mother lode. You want cheating, ask a pro football player.

I knew an American import once who was recalled to the United States by his draft board. When last seen he was beating his knee with a knotted wet towel.

"Makes it swell up," he explained. "Ain't no way they take a guy with a bad knee."

In case the knee trick didn't work he pigged out on Coke just before the test to screw up his urine. He guzzled so much the Army must have thought it was drafting a sugar beet. And in case that failed he put a flake of corn starch unders his fingernail to drop into the sample. "Screws it up fine," he said. "Jes' fine!"

I'm not sure which one did it, but he never missed a game.

One Canadian linebacker had his arm in a cast for years. It allowed him certain liberties with opposing linemen, who tended to fall down when struck by it.

Game after game officials checked the cast to be sure it was covered with soft padding, and it was always soft. That's because he'd soak it in water to soften the plaster just before leaving the dressing room. By the end of the first quarter it had dried to where it was hard as a rock.

Another linebacker used to take the rolls out of the adhesive tape cans and use the tape to fix the cans to his arms under his sweater. It was like being hit by a garbage can.

That's the type of expertise and dedication we need if we're ever to become a world athletic power. For Cheat Canada, Iona. I'm begging.

There's no time to waste. Order the blazers right now.

SITTING-DOWN ARGUMENT is in vain as San Francisco shortstop Johnnie Le Master disputes call at second base by umpire Andy Olsen during fourth inning of National League baseball game between Giants and Chicago Cubs Tuesday night. Olsen shouts at San Francisco pitcher John Montefusco, who continued complaint and was ejected from game. Le Master lost argument and Cubs went on for 7-6 victory in 11 innings. (AP laserphoto)

Rocks Lose Rough One

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Burrards played the part of spoilers — again — by beating Victoria Sharmocks 15-9 in Western Lacrosse Association play here Tuesday night.

The Mann Cup champions, who edged Victoria in the WLA playoff final last season, prevented the Irish from clinching first place by scoring the victory at Kerrisdale Arena.

But the Shamrocks have another chance to claim clear title tonight while playing Nanaimo Timbermen at 8 in Victoria's Memorial Arena.

Burrards scored eight power-play goals to beat the Victoria club in a penalty-filled game from which nine players were ejected.

Rico Bellusci scored five goals to lead the Burrards, four of them coming with Vancouver holding a man advantage.

Pat Ryan added three for Vancouver, which held period leads of 5-4 and 11-6. Doug Hayes and Dave Tasker each had a pair.

Norm Baker had three goals and three assists to lead Victoria. Chris Hall, Charn Dhillon, Dan Green, Larry Bell, Gerry McKenna and Gerry Cadwallader completed the Victoria scoring with one goal each.

Vancouver picked up 100 of the game's 195 penalty minutes. Nine players, five from Burrards, were ejected in the third period after a brawl started by Victoria's Baker and Ward Sanderson of Vancouver.

Cadwallader, goaltender Scott Marshall, Jerry Kustaski and Dennis Somner were sent to the Victoria dressing room while Sanderson, Pinder, Taki-Vohalis, Joe Marrello and Brad Berrow of Burrards were ejected.

Bellusci received a game misconduct earlier in the period.

Larry Smeltzer made 32 saves for Victoria before being replaced by Marshall, who blocked two shots. Dave Evans stopped 33 for the Burrards before Berrow replaced him and turned back a pair.

Pair of Loggers Cup Down Mussels

Bill Demo and Pete Rabassa proved a deadly combination Tuesday night, guiding Gray's Harbor Loggers to an 8-2 decision over Victoria Mussels in Northwest League baseball play before about 400 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

It was the seventh straight victory for the Loggers, who are now 17-11 for the season.

Defeat left Victoria with a 9-16 record after winning five of their last nine games.

Demo, using an assortment of off-speed breaking pitches and an occasional fastball, shackled Victoria batters with three hits while striking out six and yielding only three walks.

Rabassa put on an awesome batting display.

He hit three doubles in three turns at bat before slamming a home run in the sixth inning. Rabassa drove in five runs before hitting a hard ground-out in the ninth.

Two of the three Victoria hits came on successive home runs in the second inning.

Newby's scratch seventh-inning single was the only other hit allowed by Demo.

Starter Frank Lucarelli, now 1-3, took the loss, giving up five walks, six hits and four earned runs in three and two-thirds innings.

In other league action, Walla Walla Padres increased their edge in the Northern Division by bombarding five Bellingham pitchers for 10 hits en route to a 16-0 victory over the Mariners, who are second in the same division, while Eugene Emeralds halted Bend Timber Hawks, 2-1.

A three-run homer by Bob Volk paced the Padres' attack. Clubmate Doug Gwodz rapped a two-run double and drove in four runs.

Bellingham committed six errors in defeat.

Timber Hawks managed 10 hits against Eugene but left 11 runners on base in their fifth consecutive loss. Eugene pitcher Brad Lesley struck out eight batters and walked only two.

By Grace of Chub, Sutton Bags 200th

By Associated Press

Don Sutton thanked the umpires, J. R. Richard thanked his natural ability and Eric Rasmussen thanked his lucky stars in a night that saw some outstanding pitching performances in baseball's National League.

Los Angeles right-hander Sutton, in uniform only by the grace of league president Chub Feeney, made a six-hitter stand up for a 7-2 win Tuesday night over Pittsburgh Pirates and his 200th career victory.

Richard, Houston Astros' strikeout king, fanned 10 and gave up three hits to beat Philadelphia Phillies 9-1. And Rasmussen, acquired by San Diego in May from St. Louis, hurled a five-hitter in his first start against his former club as the Padres beat the Cardinals 3-2.

Sutton, Richard and Rasmussen weren't the only pitchers in the league with live arms Tuesday night. Phil Niekro handcuffed New York Mets on six hits in Atlanta Braves' 4-3 victory and Hal Dues of Montreal yielded only four hits to Cincinnati in 6 2-3 innings as the Expos downed the Reds 3-1.

Jerry Koosman of the Mets also threw a six-hitter, but lost to Niekro.

Elsewhere, Chicago Cubs edged San Francisco Giants 7-6 in 11 innings as both clubs used five pitchers.

Sutton, now 10-8, picked up his 200th victory only one day after Feeney decided not to suspend him after he was caught throwing defaced baseballs last Friday night in St. Louis. Sutton was ejected from the game after home plate umpire Doug Harvey confiscated several scuffed balls.

Joe Ferguson's three-run homer highlighted Los Angeles' five-run outburst in the fourth inning off Pirates starter Don Robinson, 5-4, while Sutton walked one and struck out six in his seventh complete game of the season.

"I looked at quite a few balls tonight and I saw nothing out of the ordinary," said plate umpire Paul Pryor.

Sutton joins Don Drysdale as the only Dodgers pitchers with 200 or more career victories. Drysdale finished his career with 209. Sutton, whose career record is 200-152, became the 76th pitcher in baseball history to win 200 games.

Niekro, 11-9, struck out seven with his knuckleball and didn't walk a batter. Dale Murphy hit a two-run homer for the Braves in the sixth, giving him six in six games.

In the American League, Otto Velez's RBI single, his third hit in as many at-bats, with two out in the 10th inning gave Toronto Blue Jays a 13-12 win over Seattle Seattle Mariners. Milwaukee Brewers dumped Chicago White Sox 7-2, Baltimore Orioles whipped Texas Rangers 5-1, Cleveland Indians trimmed California Angels 8-3 and Oakland A's stopped Detroit Tigers 6-3.

Macs Extend Leaders Under New Coaches

Victoria McDonalds, playing for the first time under new coach Steve Buckley, stayed close to league-leading Burnaby Cablevision but dropped a 13-11 decision to last year's national champions Tuesday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Buckley and assistants John Entzminger and Dave Lowden were behind the bench for the first time as the Victoria club trailed by narrow period scores of 5-3 and 10-9 but were unable to close the gap before time ran out in the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League contest.

Paul Delmonte scored three goals and John Swan counted a goal and five assists to pace the Cable attack.

Lloyd Symonds and Gary Purdon helped out with two goals each and other singles were fired by Steve Lajeune, Lyle Robinson, John Purdon, Derek Dickson and Terry Bingley.

Tarey Pollock led Victoria with three goals and four assists while intermediate pickup John Crowther added two and singles came from Kevin Kennedy, Mike Game, Greg McInnes, Rhys Wickes, Doug Angrove and Kelly Jay.

Bill Thomas and Mike Duch combined goaltending talents to block 45 shots on the McDonalds net while Rod Bannister made 42 saves for Burnaby.

Hurting Clubs Can Be Dangerous

By Canadian Press

It may sound strange but Toronto head coach Leo Cahill admits he was a bit apprehensive when he heard rumblings out of Montreal that the Alouettes were hurting as they came into Tuesday night's Canadian Football League game with the Argonauts.

His concern proved to be justified as the Alouettes battled their way to a 30-23 victory over the Argos in a highly-spirited contest between the Eastern Football Conference rivals—a confrontation which featured a total of 327 yards in penalties.

"A team cries about injuries and you know they'll come out and play like hell," Cahill said of the Alouettes, who were without two standouts—tight end Peter Dalla Riva and defensive end Junior Ah You—and had several others operating at below capacity.

"We heard how this Montreal guy and that Montreal guy wouldn't be able to play. But a team like that, playing on its home field, has pride."

In a Western Conference game, Edmonton Eskimos spotted Winnipeg an early 10-point lead and then roared back with 25 in a row en route to a 29-28 victory over the Blue Bombers.

The Als-Argos confrontation was just that as tempers flared on several occasions. Late in the fourth quarter, a pair of Argos—linebacker Larry Brame and defensive end Wayne Smith—were ejected following a pileup.

As early as half time, referee Bill Dell had to keep the two sides apart as they made their way to their respective dressing rooms.

Montreal running back John O'Leary, who suffered an injured leg in the pileup which resulted in the two ejections, said the Alouettes simply ran their basic offence.

"The press really blows the cheap-shot thing out of proportion. It's a long season."

Als head coach Joe Scannella declined to comment on the accusations.

"It would be bush if I did," he said. "It would be best if it was all forgotten."

Joe Barnes went most of the way at quarterback for the winners and engineered touchdowns in the first, third and fourth quarters. He scored the first himself on a 12-yard run into the right corner of the end zone late in the first quarter, threw an 18-yard pass to Chuck McMann in the third and handed off to O'Leary on a one-yard plunge in the fourth.

Don Sweet converted all three Montreal touchdowns and added field goals of 37, 12 and 19 yards.

Until the fourth quarter, when Dwight Edwards caught a 71-yard bomb from quarterback Chuck Ealey and Mark Bragagnolo hauled in a four-yard Ealey strike, the Argos' only points came from the toe of Ian Sunter on field goals of 35, 47 and 34 yards.

Meanwhile, Edmonton head coach Hugh Campbell said he feels both the Eskimos and Blue Bombers learned something from Tuesday's game.

"I think the great thing about it, that both teams can cherish, is that they both came back—they both wouldn't quit," he said. "I think that the Bombers will really build from what happened tonight and I know that we're going to.

Veteran quarterback Tom Wilkinson, using running back Jim Germany and split end Waddell Smith to good advantage, dissected the Winnipeg defence during the second quarter before giving way to rookie Warren Moon in the third.

By then, the Eskimos had a comfortable 25-10 lead and Moon produced just enough points to give the defending WFC champions their second straight win. The loss was Winnipeg's second in as many starts.

Germany made touchdown runs of 13 yards and one yard and Wilkinson hit Stu Lang for seven yards for the Eskimos' other touchdown.

Tonight, Saskatchewan Roughriders get their first taste of regular-season play when they go up against the Ticats in Hamilton in a game to be televised on the full CTV network, beginning at 8 p.m. EDT. British Columbia Lions will be out to improve their record to 2-0 when they meet the winless Stampeders in Calgary.

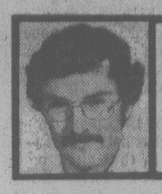
Land-Use Controversy Heating Up Misty Isles



OUTDOORS
stewart lang

"Extremely rugged, bare-topped mountain ranges, gashed by fog-shrouded fiords, rise abruptly on the west and to the east fall off more gradually into dozens of islands of various sizes and shapes.

"The landscape is a tapestry of snowy peaks, green islands, and the blue sea."

These words describe the "Misty Isles" of the Queen Charlottes, where a land-use conflict of monumental proportions is brewing.

The controversy centres on South Moresby, and like many other conflicts currently underway in various parts of British Columbia, involves a clash between companies who plan to log parts of the area and conservationists who wish to preserve a region rich in biological and historical significance.

Parks Canada commissioned a study on the area which was completed last year.

"The single most outstanding area on the Queen Charlotte Islands for a potential National Park is undoubtedly that area covered by the South Moresby Wilderness Proposal," states the report.

"This area is rich in visual variety with many fiords, islets, forests, seabird colonies, falcons, eagles, sea lion rookery and haulouts against the background of the impressive San Christoval mountain range.

"Totem poles, a hot spring, interesting flora and vegetation and an exceedingly rich marine life add to the area's richness."

The South Moresby proposal covers 550 square miles or about 15 per cent of the Queen Charlotte Islands. Yet it is relatively small, less than two-thirds the size of Strathcona Park on Vancouver Island and smaller than eight existing provincial parks.

"Timber extraction is the main source of both employment and ecological distruption on the Islands," states the study.

There are three tree-farm licences in the study area — TFL 2 is supposed to be perpetual while TFLs 24 and 39 have 21-year renewable terms.

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. managed TFLs 2 and 39.

But TFL 24, managed by Rayonier Ltd., is the most contentious.

"About 1,500 acres are currently logged annually in TFL 24. Blocks 3 (Lyell Island), 4 (Burnaby Island) and 5 (Southeastern Moresby Island) contain 60 per cent of the remaining mature timber in the licence.

"Present plans call for all merchantable timber in the TFL to be logged within at least 30 years."

Perhaps the crux of the problem revolves around the expiry date of TFL 24 — 1979.

It will be among the first of the TFLs to come up for renewal under the new Forest Act, where there are no provisions for public participation in the renewal procedures.

Forests minister Tom Waterland has already spelled out his department's position in a letter to A. Anderson of Rayonier:

"The present government believes in honoring contracts, thus there will be no withdrawals of land from TFL 24." — at least for the terms of the contract.

Conservative leader Vic Stephens gave strong support to the concept of public participation during legislative debate on the Forest Act.

"Give the people of that area and the people of British Columbia at least a public hearing on that one."

"If you don't . . . and if the area is entirely lost, then this minister will have to bear that on his back and his conscience forever, because you will never again be able to find anywhere in this world anything equivalent to that particular island."

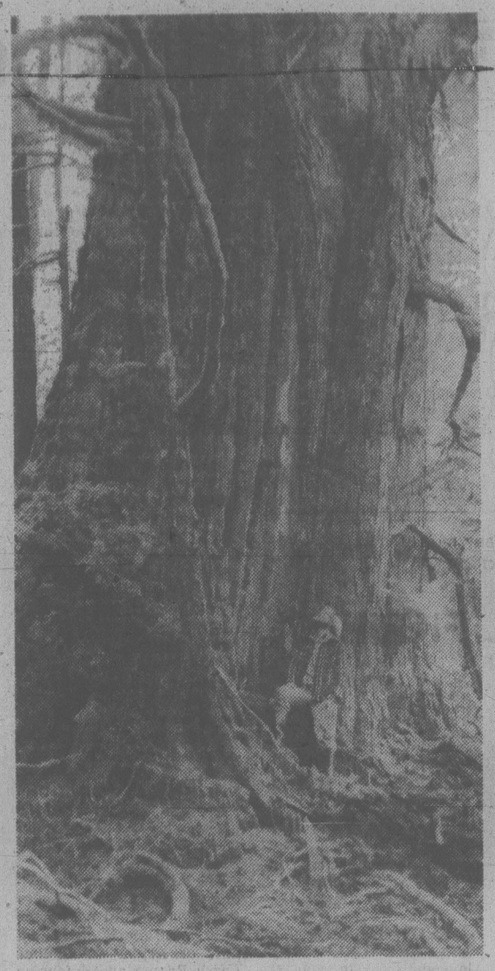
But perhaps there is hope the provincial government, which will have the final say on the disposition of South Moresby, might make a commitment to preserve the area in one form or another.

Tom Lee, director the provicial parks branch, recently returned from a field trip to the region and is reported to have voiced the comment that South Moresby "should have been one of the original parks" set up in the provincial system.

Lee is supposed to make a report to recreation and conservation minister Sam Bawlf, who is also scheduled to take personal look at the area during August.

In addition, a report by the Environment and Land Use Committee on the various potentials within the region is due by the end of September.

On Friday, we'll discuss alternate methods which could be used to preserve the region and the various positions taken by factions involved in the controversy.



GAZING UP at trunk, Paul George is dwarfed by massive red cedar tree near Windy Bay on South Morsesby Island. Tree is part of virgin watershed area within South Moresby wilderness proposal region of the Queen Charlotte Islands that is in danger of being logged as part of a Rayonier Ltd. Tree Farm Licence. Lakehill Trips Sidney Squad

Lakehill poured nine runs into the fourth inning to erase a 4-0 deficit and then held on for a 10-8 victory over Sidney in an opening-round game of the Greater Victoria Little League district baseball championship Tuesday at Lambrick Park.

Jamie Porpaczy capped the fourth-inning outburst with a three-run homer and winning-pitcher Bill Haddow drove in two of the other runs with a single.

Haddow ran into trouble in the fifth frame but Porpaczy came on in relief to earn the save.

Ron Green and Steve Hodges set the pace for Sidney by each hitting a double and a triple.

Action in the six-team, double-loss elimination tourney continues tonight with Gordon Head playing Layritz at 6:30.

Sidney	301 031—	8 6 5

Richard Myerscough and Steve Hodges; Bill Haddow, Jamie Porpaczy (5) and Gary Leibel. Home run: Lakehill—Porpaczy.

GORDON HEAD WINS

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Victoria Gordon Head edged North Vancouver 3-2 in an extra inning Tuesday, eliminating the host club from the British Columbia Babe Ruth baseball championship for 13 year olds.

Gordon Head, with one loss in the double-knockout tournament, now plays Trail, which Tuesday suffered its first loss, a 10-2 trouncing by Vancouver.

The winner of the Gordon Head-Trail game will play Vancouver Thursday and will have to beat the Vancouver club twice to win the championship.

Troy Dawson was the winning pitcher for Gordon Head Tuesday, tossing a five-hitter. Two of those hits were off the bat of North Vancouver's Greg Werbowski.

Builders Best in Hit Spree

Juan de Fuca Builders topped Elks 8-4 as both Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League teams went on a hitting spree Tuesday at Central Park.

In another league game, Victoria Athletics and Seaboard Construction played to a scoreless draw in nine innings.

Warren Campbell, Len Carolan and Mick Christianson hit home runs to spark the Builders. Campbell also contributed a double and a single to score three times and winning-pitcher Carolan added a single and drove in three runs.

Rich Jones set the pace for Elks by driving in two runs on a pair of hits.

Barry Wilkin and Randy Jackson combined to pitch a four-hitter for Seaboard and Tom Robertson hit two singles.

Ken Fox scattered seven hits while pitching the distance for Athletics.

In Heywood Men's League play, Lee York singled and scored in the ninth inning to give Remco Office Systems a 6-5 edge over Webb and Trace at Heywood Avenue Park.

Richdale, Kasper and York each had two hits to drive in two runs.

Barry Moen tripled and homered to drive in two runs for Webb and Trace.

STINGERS CLASH WITH WHALERS

It will be Victoria Stingers against Juan de Fuca Whalers as playoffs in the Vancouver Island Junior 'B' Lacrosse League open Thursday at 9 p.m. in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Whalers and Stingers will complete the two-game, semi-final series on July 24 in an 8 p.m. contest at Sooke. The winner starts a two-game final the following night at 9 on the home floor of Saanich Hunter Construction, the league champion.

Girl Cadet Bisley Surprise

BISLEY, England (CP) — Canadian eyes today were on a marksman from Nova Scotia and a 15-year-old girl cadet from Ontario as shooting continued in the annual Bisley rifle competition.

John Marshal of New Glasgow, N.S., and Andrew Powell of Australia are the co-leaders in a field of more than 1,000 shooters with four of 10 events fired in the Grand Aggregate, the over-all championship.

Each has scored 194 out of a possible 200 points, a single point ahead of Jimmy Spaight, the leading English shot and last year's Grand Aggregate winner.

But it was Mimi Bellefeuille of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., a cadet with the 49th Field Artillery, in 34th place on the leader board, that held the delight of the Canadian contingent.

On her first visit to Bisley, she had scored 190 out of a possible 200 points in the Grand Aggregate.

"It is an achievement for a young girl to get onto the aggregate board at about the middle of the list when so many top international marksmen are competing," said Dick Hampton of Ottawa, cadet team coach and former Queen's Prize winner in the more than 30 years he has been attending the shooting competition.

Bellefeuille was tied after Tuesday's events with former British winner of the Queen's Prize, Walter Magnay, and one point ahead of two other Queen's Prize winners, George Arnold and Keith Pilcher.

In the Alexandra Challenge Cup event, Marshall and Don Bullock of West Vancouver tied with eight others for the highest possible score, 50 for 10 shots at 600 yards.

PGA REDUCES MONEY AT TOP

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Professional Golf Association reduced first-place prize money at its tournaments to 18 per cent from 20 at a meeting Tuesday.

PGA commissioner Deane Beman announced the money breakdown after the meeting at Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, where some 150 pros tee off Thursday in the $250,000 Philadelphia tournament.

Beaman said a majority of the money, which has been taken off the top five places, will be redistributed among the top 25 money winners with a smaller percentage to the end of the list.

As an example, Beman said, 70th place in a $250,000 tournament would be worth $500, up from $375.

The money distribution will not result in any actual loss to winners because PGA purses will be doubled over the next three years as the result of television contracts negotiated with the three major networks.

CBS and NBC will televise tour events and ABC will hold rights to the United States Open, the PGA and the British Open, three of the four major championships.

One Less Tough Challenger in Doug's Path

Bill Hobbis, the former Victorian who played with the British Columbia team at the Canadian Amateur golf tournament last year while a resident of Prince George, won't be around as expected this week at Uplands for an attempt to make life miserable for his team-mates of 1977.

Now living in Calgary, Hobbis had filed an entry for the B.C. Amateur championship, which started in near-perfect weather conditions this morning at the 6,278-yard Uplands course. This week Hobbis was invited to attend trials for the Alberta Willingdon Cup team at the national tourney.

That left him with a tough choice. He could either try for a position with the Alberta squad, or he could take another shot at the B.C. crown. Bill decided to go the Alberta route and thus one talented challenger was removed from Doug Roxburgh's path toward a third straight B.C. championship.

Six times the provincial Amateur king and twice a winner of the Canadian crown, Roxburgh was rated the man to beat as about 200 golfers launched assaults today on the Uplands greens and fairways. The 72-hole tourney continues until Saturday with the field slated to be trimmed to 80 for Friday's third round and only the to 50 and ties making it for Saturday's 18-hole finish.

Other former champions in race at Uplands include two-time winner Johnny Russell of Vancouver, Victorians Lawrie Kerr, champion in 1960, and Carl Schwantje (1970), and Bob Mitchell of Quilchena, the victor in 1974.

To be eligible to enter the provincial contest, golfers must own a handicap rating of our of less.

Junior Contracts 'Not Binding'

TORONTO (CP) — Laws governing junior hockey in Canada are obsolete and contracts tying players to junior clubs are unenforceable and not binding, Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson claims.

"Junior hockey is in a mess and I don't see any immediate improvement," Eagleson, chairman of Hockey Canada's international committee, said.

"Junior hockey has a lot to worry about in the next while. "Junior operators say their contract is iron-clad and enforceable, but it seems that every time they take it to court, they get slapped."

MIDGET TOURNEY GETS NEW NAME

TORONTO (CP) — The Wrigley midget hockey tournament has been replaced by the Air Canada Cup, the first of which will be played next April in Winnipeg, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) announced Tuesday. It will be sponsored for five years by Air Canada.

Oil Firm's Billboard A Picasso?

City hall saw it as a threat, but the Imperial Oil Ltd. executive said he was just calling a spade a spade when he said a proposed $175,000 construction project would be cancelled unless the gasoline company got to put up a big sign.

S.A. Ruocco, senior accounts executive for Imperial, told council's planning committee Tuesday that his company was going to drop plans for a major expansion of the station at 3735 Douglas because restrictions on the station sign were too severe.

"I was instructed to tell you gentlemen we're not prepared to go to a smaller sign," said Ruocco.

But Ald. Bob Wright replied that Imperial wasn't in any position to give the city an ultimatum, because council was quite prepared to see the station left just as it was.

He said the city would like the station repainted and the current sign replaced by a smaller one — and Imperial would have to meet those demands if it wanted permission to enlarge its operation.

"This is a trade-off situation . . . we are being reasonable. We could just say 'no change, leave things as they are.'"

Ruocco said he realized that and had come to the planning committee in the hopes that something could be worked out.

He said the 24-square-foot sign proposed by the city just would not do from a marketing stand point.

"As far as we're concerned that's just a spot on the wall," said Ruocco.

He said Imperial needed a sign 55 square feet so that motorists could see it a block away.

"You may be the experts in city affairs but we have the experts in marketing," said Ruocco.

Eventually the committee agreed that the larger sign would be acceptable as long as it had a low profile and was mounted on a landscaped rock stand.

Ruocco agreed to that, saying "It will be a thing of beauty."

Replied Wright: "You're going to need a Picasso to make that a thing of beauty."

Ruocco was told council would have to see drawings of the sign before giving final approval.

Sidney Okays Controversial Trailer Park

The controversial mobile home park on 33 acres of land in the Frost Avenue-Canora Road area was approved by Sidney council Tuesday.

The vote was four to two. Alderman James Lang, Jerry Tegaskis, Eleanor Sowerby and Bernard Ethier voted for the development. Peter Grant and Ross Martin voted against.

While Mayor Dick Leigh did not vote, he told the special council meeting he was in favor of the 240-unit project.

Petitions on the project, to be callled Summergate Village, showed about 300 persons against it, and 35 in favor.

The land in question was removed from the Agricultural Land Reserve (ALR) in January at the request of the developer, Fred Purvis of Leisure Villa Estates Ltd.

The Capital Region District planning staff was opposed to removing the land from ALR.

In approving the project, council in a surprise move voted in favor of requesting that Sidney resident Norma Sealey, a former alderman, give Sidney council a public apology.

Sidney Major Dick Leigh claimed council was maligned by Mrs. Sealey at a public hearing last Thursday.

Mrs. Sealey at the meeting said council had represented the developer of a proposed mobile home park and not the broad interests of the town.

The project was controversial. As early as February, some aldermen were promoting the development at a council meeting.

Council in the same month assured the company water for the project would be available.

Tenants farming the land were also given eviction notices Feb. 1 by Gillespie Investments of Vancouver, a company associated with Leisure Villa.

Most council members believe the project will be a tax boon to the town, enhancing property values with no adverse effect on the sewage treatment plant in Sidney.

Alaska Highway Jobs Set

OTTAWA (CP)—A long-planned, multi-million-dollar project to pave and rebuild stretches of the Alaska Highway and the Haines Highway in the Yukon will start this summer, the government said Tuesday, promising hundreds of construction jobs during the next 10 years.

The United States will pay the full cost of the project — estimated at $200 million — under a 1976 agreement with Canada, the fruit of negotiations that began in 1965.

Improving the dirt-and-gravel Canadian sections of the international highways has taken on more urgency with the agreement last year to build a pipeline along the Alaska Highway route to carry Alaskan natural gas to southern markets.

An announcement Tuesday by the northern affairs department says a new exchange of letters between Ottawa and Washington provides that "90 per cent of the employment on the U.S.-funded project should be reserved for Canadians." Yukon residents will be given preference for the Canadian jobs, the department says.

The number of jobs will vary during the life of the program — named the Shakwak Project — from an estimated 244 this year to a projected peak of more than 1,000 jobs in 1984, an official said.

Work will be inaugurated formally Aug. 15 at Haines Junction, the Yukon centre where the Haines Highway running north from Haines in the Alaska Panhandle joins the Alaska Highway.

Scheduled announcements Thursday in Ottawa and Washington will give details of procedures whereby U.S. and Canadian contractors may bid for work on the roads, which will include upgrading and relocating some sections, replacing bridges and paving a total of 514 kilometres.

The U.S.-Canada agreement allows for flexibility in hiring, depending on the location of the contract, says the northern affairs department, but the over-all number of Americans to be employed cannot exceed 10 per cent during the 10-year life of the project. There is also provision for contractors to bring in key American supervisors, but the number cannot exceed 10 persons on any single contract.

Northern Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner issued a statement saying the project is encouraging for the Yukon and the territory's 22,000 people.

"The fact that work will begin before the Alaska pipeline project and continue after its completion should do much to promote more balanced economic development," Faulkner said. "It will prepare Yukoners for pipeline work and soften the impact of the post-construction period."

The $11 billion pipeline is scheduled to be built in the early 1980s, while highway work will continue to 1989 under present plans.

Improvement of the Alaska Highway has been debated for years. The 2,440-kilometre road was built through northern wilderness in 1942 as a military transport link when a Japanese invasion of Alaska was feared. It runs between Fairbanks, Alaska, and Dawson Creek in northeastern British Columbia by way of the Yukon, linking up with Alberta highways to the Montana border.

The 256-kilometre Haines road is a key tributary route, providing a shorter land transshipment route for supplies shipped to Haines by sea.

The American sections of the roads have been paved and Canada has been responsible since 1946 for maintenance of stretches in its territory.

Proposals in 1965 for improvement of the Canadian parts of the Alaska Highway broke down on the strength of a study showing the costs would outstrip the benefits. Sections in British Columbia have been improved and bridges replaced. Negotiations for improving the Yukon sections resumed in 1971, finally producing agreement five years later.

English Language TV For More Quebecers

MONTREAL (CP) — Scores of isolated English-language communities throughout Quebec are being plugged into the rest of Canada this year with expansion of CBC services that has Quebec City smouldering with discontent.

Part of CBC's "accelerated coverage plan," a $60-million program throughout Canada, the Quebec phase involves about 150 radio and television installations, two-thirds of them in English. Quebec accounts for about one-fifth of the over-all Canadian plan.

French-language services also are being added—this is the thrust of the program outside Quebec—but francophones are benefiting from the English-language services here as well.

Despite rumblings from the provincial communications department and nationalist groups in Quebec, there are strong indications that French-speaking communities are just as anxious to have English-language television as are English-speaking Quebec residents.

For example, the tiny mining community of Havre St. Pierre, 750 kilometres east of Quebec City on the desolate north shore of the St. Lawrence near the Labrador border, formally requested an English-language television outlet.

Despite a resolution from the municipal council, said town manager Denis R. Boudreau, Havre St. Pierre has been refused by the CBC.

The reason: Only about one per cent of the population of 3,500 claims English as its mother tongue. So the village will have to be content with one TV station—Radio Canada's French-language service from Matane on the south shore—and with picking up English-language radio stations at night from the United States.

"We were trying to have a more interesting range of services," said Boudreau, "and we don't think it would have cost that much since the microwave equipment passes right through the community."

The CBC, however, requires that there be at least 500 persons listed in the federal census whose mother tongue is English, or 400 English and 200 officially bilingual residents.

The Quebec government's position is that no English-language services should be offered or expanded in the province until all areas are fully served in French.

That tone, struck by former Liberal communications minister Jean-Paul L'Allier, dates from 1974 when the CBC announced its advanced coverage plan.

Said Deputy Communications Minister Gerard Fri-gon: "That will always be the position of the Quebec government, no matter what party is in power, but even more so now (with the Parti Quebecois)."

He said Quebec wants at least two television and two radio outlets available in French before any money is spent on English-language installations.

POT PLANTS GROWN 'JUST FOR BEAUTY'

EDMONTON (CP) — A city woman who says she nurtured 21 marijuana plants at her home because she liked their appearance was fined $200 Tuesday.

Marcia Mogus pleaded guilty in Provincial Court to possession of a narcotic and told the judge she did not have the plants in and around her house because she liked to smoke the leaves.

"I had them because I like the plants," she said.

"They're beautiful plants, and I have lots of beautiful plants in the house."

Judge E. D. Stack told Mrs. Mogus possession of the drug is illegal, whether for smoking or observing, and sentenced her the fine or 30 days in jail.

Poverty the Root Of Canada's Ills: Begin

MONTREAL (CP) — Welfare Minister Monique Begin said Tuesday the income tax system should be changed to provide the poor with fixed refunds even if they are too poor to pay income tax.

Speaking at an international conference on youth magistrates, Miss Begin said income tax redistribution is necessary for the poor to make decent lives for themselves and their children.

"There are two million Canadian children from 600,000 families who do not have enough money," said the minister, a former teacher who taught in St. Henri, one of Montreal's poorest neighborhoods.

"They (former students) give dramatic shape to the cold statistics that cross my desk as minister . . . and show the tangled social mess that begins with poverty and unemployment and branches out to such things as violent crime, depression and sickness, early death and suicide, child abuse and other violence in the family."

The worst obstacle to relieving poverty, she said, is in the minds of the majority of Canadians who are better off.

"Let's face it. Poverty is at the root of most of our ills."

Miss Begin said too many children in Canada's affluent society are still undernourished, live in crowded housing and are closely involved in family money worries."

CBC TALKS ON

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiations between the CBC and its technicians' union continue with negotiators remaining tight-lipped about their progress.

"The talks are going on at this moment," Ivan Morin, a negotiator for the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians said Tuesday night. "I'm not really at liberty to say any more at this point."

The CBC has a commitment to provide basic coverage of the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton, scheduled Aug. 3-12, to participating countries.

The network is offering a six per cent wage increase in a one year contract and the union is asking for a two-year contract containing increases ranging from nine to 12 per cent in the first year and four per cent in the second along with a cost-of-living clause.

Fake Message Intended To Avert PQ Infiltration

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Chief Supt. Donald Cobb maintained Tuesday that he issued a fake terrorist communique Dec. 19, 1971, to head off "mass infiltration" of the Parti Quebecois by members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ).

The fake exhorted terrorists to ignore FLQ intellectual Pierre Vallieres' appeal Dec. 6, 1971, to forego violence and join the Parti Quebecois in a peaceful effort tn bring about Quebec independence.

Cobb told a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing that the fake was published as genuine by newspapers and, he thought, by Time Magazine. His superiors didn't know it was a fake and it probably found it's way to the desk of the solicitor-general.

"I never had any doubt that doing it was within my terms of reference," Cobb said.

He felt the felquistes would be more visible in Charles Gagnon's following than in the Parti Quebecois. Gagnon was a radical intellectual who had split with Vallieres and appeared to be forming a labor party in Quebec.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, the commission chairman, warned Cobb that it was risky for police to arrange the electoral process. There was a serious disregard for the process when security police made decisions about who should join a political party.

RCMP lawyer Pierre Lamontagne fought off efforts by commissioner Guy Gilbert to have Cobb say whether or not he had discussed with superiors in Ottawa the subject of issuing fakes.

"I'm trying to protect the public's right not to know," Lamontagne stormed, drawing laughter from the press table and smiles from the room.

However, Lamontagne was serious.

He said that replying to Gilbert's question in public was against the basic interests of Canada.

If such questions were answered, "we'll have the whole picture" made public of how officials make decisions.

"It's highly dangerous."

Gilbert agreed reluctantly to take another approach. He asked whether Cobb had ever mentioned to superiors that he might want to issue fakes Cobb said he had been aware in August, 1971 — when he discussed policy with director-general John Starnes of the RCMP security service — that this kind of tactic was possible.

Cobb said he had RCMP linguist Helene Vigent draft the communique and subordinates Bernard Dubuc and Richard Daigle distribute copies, two in Montreal and one in Quebec City. One copy was placed in St. Joseph's Oratory, a Roman Catholic shrine near Cobb's house in Montreal.

Reporters then were tipped off, because they customarily printed such communiques without going to police with them first. It was "pietic justice" that the reporters "should serve a disruptive purpose," Cobb said.

When Gilbert asked who had drawn the "bonhomme habitant" — the rifle-toting symbol of the FLQ — on the fake, Lamontagne objected, saying that to divulge the identity would give away a special RCMP talent and thus intrude on national security. Cobb said he didn't know who had drawn the figure.

"If I did not want you to know, I would tell you a lie," Cobb said when Gilbert pressed the matter.

When royal commissioner Donald C. Rickerd referred to the forgery sections of the Criminal Code, Lamontagne said:

"If it (the fake) is a forgery, I guarantee I will eat my shirt right here in public before all these impressionable young journalists. There is no way that is a forgery."

When Rickerd said he wasn't suggesting that the foregery section applied, Lamontagne said "impressionable journalists" might get the idea from the question that "some crime was committed."

July 1 Party Pleases Organizer

OTTAWA (CP) — Looking back on the $4.5 million July 1 birthday party he helped organize for Canada, Andre Masse, Festival Canada's co-director for French Canada, says Canadians got their money's worth.

"If there are roses to be distributed, I want one. I am pretty proud of what we did," he said in an interview from Montreal. "I have no major misgivings about the way the money was spent—just a few minor ones.

"I don't think $4.5 million is a hell of a lot of money, either. The first duty of a state is to defend its existence."

Masse is quitting his Festival Canada job in September, three months before his contract expires.

He rejected a report that he is quitting because he disagrees with the federal approach to promoting national unity.

One suggestion will be that organizers start before November, since this year's six-month organizing campaign was rushed, leading to long hours and tension.

He said one problem was that Quebecers tended to compare the federal government's Canada Day celebrations with the Quebec government's St. Jean Baptiste Day party.

Florida French Tuned Out

WASHINGTON (CP) — The tens of thousands of French-speaking Canadians who go to Florida for winter sun will probably not have French-language Canadian news broadcasts when they return this winter, a Nova Scotia broadcaster said Monday.

Finlay MacDonald, who in previous winters has provided daily Canadian news broadcasts in Florida in both English and French, said in a telephone interview that the French service will likely be discontinued.

The problem, he said, is neither audience nor advertisers. The 10-minute daily broadcast, carried from October through April, has plenty of each.

But the radio station carrying the broadcast has found that the 10 minutes of French caused many of its regular listeners to tune out, a development they considered "so severe as to be prejudicial to their normal American operations," MacDonald said.

The time for the French-language broadcast, Nouvelles de Chez Nous, was sold to MacDonald, who in turn would line up paying advertisers and provide the news broadcast.

A similar English news program, Canada Calling, has been on a network of Florida stations for many years and was acquired by MacDonald five years ago. The French program started two years ago.

"It takes the 15 stations to cover the English in Florida," he said. "The French for all practical purposes are just in one place."

Most of the French-speaking Canadians who become Florida winter residents, he said, are concentrated on the eastern coast north of Miami beach and south of West Palm beach.

Those who stay three to six months, he said, total about 50,000 to 60,000 people and are a worthwhile advertising target for Canadian and other advertisers.

They also have been an appreciative audience, sending "hundreds of letters" to the program.

"Here's a program with all kinds of audience and all kinds of advertisers, but it was cancelled," MacDonald said with evident frustration.

But he also expressed optimism that some media might still be found to bring the advertisers and audience together.

"The audience is there. They'll go wherever they are told to go to pick up that program."

PLOT TO UP BEER PRICE DENIED

EDMONTON (CP) — Officials of Labatt's Brewery, the Alberta Liquor Control Board and a provincial cabinet minister all deny a plan exists to raise beer prices Jan. 1.

Bruce Elliot, Labatt's regional vice-president responsible for Western Canada, said Tuesday his company will probably ask city police to investigate how the Sun obtained a private letter written to Ontario by Jim Ranson, the brewery's general manager for Alberta.

He said Labatt's has no agreement with Solicitor-General Roy Farran to ask for a second beer price increase within 12 months, effective Jan. 1.

The Sun said in a story Tuesday that a plan for the price increases was worked out last March between the province's three major breweries and Farran, minister responsible for the liquor board. The story said the plan was allegedly formed at the solicitor-general's request.

GM After Rebates

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. wants to match a $200 rebate awarded to United States buyers of 1977 Oldsmobiles, Pontiacs and Buicks fitted with Chevrolet engines, a company spokesman said Tuesday.

Information officer Don Sanford said General Motors is negotiating with the provinces for permission to offer the settlement to about 2,000 Canadian buyers.

Sanford said the company will notify its customers after clearance is obtained from various provincial agencies.

A U.S. federal judge this week approved a nation-wide settlement for about 67,000 American owners of Oldsmobiles with Chevrolet engines.

The ruling endorsed an agreement betweeen General Motors Corp. and attorneys-general from many of the 46 states where the Chevrolet-equipped Oldsmobiles were sold prior to April 10, 1977. The states had threatened to take the company to court if no settlement was reached.

General Motors in Canada will not make any public announcement until discussions with the provinces are complete but hopes to have "something definite in the near future," Sanford said.

He said the company has received some complaints from Canadian buyers of the three models with Chevrolet engines.

Control Tower Closures Defended by Lang

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang says the transport department hopes to save more than $1 million a year by closing the control towers of eight airports in the early morning hours.

Responding the criticism from a Progressive Conservative MP, Lang says it is proposed to shut the towers at Dorval in Montreal, Ottawa, Edmonton International, Victoria, Halifax, Moncton, N.B., and St. John's, Nfld., during the "quiet hours" between midnight and 6 a.m. or 8 a.m.

The towers at St. Hubert, Que., and Quebec City already were closed during those hours.

He says because of the anticipated savings, he will give serious consideration to the proposal, which could involve other airports across the country.

Michael Forrestall, MP for Dartmouth-Halifax East, issued a statement Tuesday criticizing the proposal, particulary as it concerns Halifax and the Atlantic provinces. He questioned there would be any saving.

Forrestall released a letter Lang wrote him and later Lang's office issued a statement.

Lang said the idea is to find sensible savings only when safety is assured. One airport in each region would continue 24-hour service to ensure normal and emergency service at all times. These were Gander, Nfld., Mirabel near Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

The towers would be closed at periods when there was little if any need for them, resulting in operation and maintenance cost savings.

Consideration was being given to reducing airport emergency service in the quiet hours at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Regina, Goose Bay, Labrador, Yellowknife, N.W.T., and Penticton. There also was consideration of reducing manpower requirements at certain area control centres and air terminal control units.

He said reductions in service are fully discussed with unions, airlines, the Air Transport Association, local communities and interested parties.

Lang said it is hoped there would be no layoffs of workers and savings would be made through transfers and attrition.

He said Lang is ignoring the probabilty of Gander becoming the advance staging base for the air force's new interceptor squadrons. This would mean that the airport's technical stopover activity must be transferred to another airport. Halifax would be an obvious choice for this but with the control tower closed six hours a day, the activity would go to Mirabel.

BIFFY TO EASE BORDER ROW

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP) — The last view of Canada in this northwestern Ontario town might be euphemistically described as a final resting place for Americans.

An outdoor biffy was set up near the border by the local Chamber of Commerce to placate U. S. tourists who sometimes wait as long as five hours on weekends to cross the Rainy River to International Falls, Minn.

The delays are mainly the result of a 60-year-old, two-lane bridge over the river owned and operated by a branch of the Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper Co. Ltd.

The company is adding another two lanes to the bridge to help cut the waiting time at the border.

But some local residents claim the long line-ups are also the result of overly meticulous searches by Canadian customs officials.

Local newspaper reporter Debra Pilon says there's been much publicity about alleged harassment of visitors returning to the United States—a claim denied by a spokesman for the customs office here.

The situation has become serious enough, however, to attract the attention of the Ontario ministry of northern affairs.

Peter Emmorey, a spokesman for the provincial department, says tourists are going home and telling their friends to stay away from the border crossing.

Nick Pidmurny, owner of the Emperor Hotel overlooking the bridge, says he's fed up with the lack of action by all levels of government.

As well, tourists crowd into the hotel to use his washroom facilities and bombard the staff with questions. Pidmurny says the provincial tourist information bureau is "hidden" 2½ blocks from the border.

The outhouse at the border and another along the route to the bridge have presumably eased the pressure on Pidmurny's plumbing, but the hotel owner is still mad about being refused permission to operate a duty-free liquor store.

Maschino Plans to 'Disappear'

MONTREAL (AFP) — Denis Maschino says he will "disappear" from public view to put an end to the sensationalism and "anti-Algerian propaganda" that has circulated since his wife Dalila was allegedly abducted by members of her own family.

"I will not stop fighting to get Dalila back," Maschino said Tuesday in an interview with Agence France-Presse. "To be reunited with her is still my strongest desire, my ultimate goal.

"We have endured and fought together for three years and nothing—not even death—is going to keep us apart.

"But I don't want our present misfortune to be a source of difficulties for the Arab community, for which I feel sympathy. So I've decided to pull back from the public view."

Maschino says his wife was abducted April 25 from the couple's Montreal home and flown back to Algeria by her brother, Messaoud Zeghar.

The Lonely Agony Of Pat Nixon

'. . .I Gave Up Everything I Ever Loved'

NEW YORK (UPI) — For Richard Nixon, the political road that led him to the White House was one of power and glory, but to his wife, it was one of pain, sacrifice and a promise broken even though her husband had put it in writing.

"I gave up everything I've ever loved," she is quoted as saying in the August edition of Good Housekeeping magazine, released Tuesday. "The people who lose out are the children. Any of the glamor or reward in it comes to the grown-ups. It's the children who really suffer."

The former first lady is quoted as saying she hated politics from the first time her husband entered the arena in 1946.

It was then, she said, that she demanded, and was promised, two ground rules — that she would never have to make speeches and that their children would be sheltered from the limelight. Both promises eventually were broken.

The article, adapted from Lester David's book, The Lonely Lady of San Clemente, said each time a disparaging cartoon of Nixon appeared in the newspapers, Tricia and Julie would come home from school in tears, tormented by classmates who jeered about their "monkey father."

"It's no fun," Julie was to say later, "to have kids tell you your father stinks."

So great was her opposition to Nixon's driving political career, that in 1954 Mrs. Nixon urged him to give it up and he promised that he would.

"On a sheet of paper she brought to him, he wrote, 'I promise to Patricia Ryan Nixon that I will not again seek public office,'" the article said. "He wrote the date, folded the paper and placed the promise in his wallet."

Earlier, at the 1952 GOP convention in Chicago — the very night Nixon was nominated for vice president — Mrs. Nixon again had pleaded with her husband not to accept, and the article said she felt he would respect her wishes.

But she learned later that night — through a television bulletin — that he had indeed accepted.

"Quickly she rushed to the convention hall and joined Nixon on the platform, smiling, gracious and cool," the article said.

Though she loathed campaigning, and though in the early years she had demanded that she not be asked to participate, she eventually worked as Nixon's entire full-time office staff, typing campaign literature, hauling it to the printer, then to the post office. Eventually, she even made the speeches.

Nixon's campaign manager called her "a hell of an asset."

But she, herself, probably summed it up best in later years.

"I do or die," she said. "I never cancel out."

QUASH SUIT: NETWORKS

MIAMI (AP) — The three major U.S. television networks Tuesday asked a federal judge to dismiss a $25 million civil suit filed by a lawyer who says TV violence led his teen-age client to kill an elderly neighbor.

Lawyers for ABC, CBS and NBC filed defence motions before U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler, asking him to drop the suit filed May 8 by lawyer Ellis Rubin on behalf of 16-year-old Ronny Zamora and his parents.

Rubin says network programming clouded Zamora's "ability to distinguish right from wrong."

The youth was convicted of shooting to death an 83-year-old Miami Beach widow in a robbery attempt at her home and has been sentenced to life in prison.

"The claim is on a direct and impermissible collision course with the first amendment" to the U.S. constitution, which guarantees freedom of speech, argued ABC lawyer William Frates.

"The collision will be sufficiently violent to alter the concepts of free speech and a free press in ways approaching the unimaginable.

"No particular network is singled out, no particular year is identified as particularly violence-filled," Frates said.

Guerrilla Aid Frozen By WCC

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (Reuter) — The World Council of Churches has frozen an $85,000 grant intended for Rhodesian guerrillas because of the unclear situation there, a spokesman for the agency said today.

Rev. Dwain Epps said in an interview that the grant to Rhodesian liberation movements will be held in trust until the situation is clarified.

"It is not at all clear in Zimbabwe who is going around killing whom," Epps said. The grant will not be made until the council is sure who the beneficiaires will be.

The WCC last year earmarked $530,000 for black African liberation movements as part of its program to combat racism.

"I am not suggesting the Patriotic Front is guiltless of excesses," Epps said. "But it is certainly unclear which of the latest attacks on white missionaries have been attributed to them or to isolated groups of Africans living in a situation of excessive violence, or the white Rhodesian army."

U.S. Diet Shift Far Too Sweet: Researchers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans are drinking only half as much coffee as they did in 1946 and eating considerably less butter, milk, candy and eggs than in previous years, according to a new study on the subject.

At the same time, they are consuming more refined sugar, mostly in soft drinks, and more dietary fat than ever before. There also have been big increases in tuna, chicken and lettuce in the average diet, it said.

The statistics are compiled in a new book, The Changing American Diet, published by the Centre for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer research group.

The authors, Michael Jacobson and Letitia Brewster, said that while some changing consumption patterns are healthy, others are not, and the negative aspects may outweigh the positive.

Since heart attacks, strokes, hardening of the arteries, cancer, cirrhosis of the liver and diabetes — six of the 10 leading causes of death — all may have some dietary link, there should be more care given to the diet, they said.

They said Americans should be encouraged to eat more fresh fruits and vegetables, potatoes, whole grains and beans, and consume less meat, high fat dairy products, oils and sugars.

"Some specific suggestions are to modify the meat grading system so that the fattest beef will no longer be considered prime, to ban advertising of sugary and fatty foods aimed at children on TV, and to begin campaigns on radio and TV to alert Americans to health consequences of the new American diet," the group said.

Illegal Gov't Aid To Indian Protest?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal agency wants too know whether it illegally provided postage to U.S. Indians for mailings used to ask support for their Longest Walk protest which now is focusing on alleged violations of their human rights.

The Indians, from more than 80 tribes, planned to meet today in LaFayette Park across from the White House. They have criticized President Carter for being out of the country when their protest march from California arrived in the capital on Saturday.

Russell Means of the American Indian Movement that helped stage the 3,000-mile trek said on Tuesday that Carter "has met with women's groups, Chicano groups, Appalachian groups and others. He refuses to meet with Indians."

Meanwhile, Sam Brown, director of ACTION, the federal volunteer agency, ordered an investigation into whether his staff broke the law by using government-paid postage to help the Indians.

A July 5 letter asked 1,000 VISTA and Peace Corps volunteers to help provide food, housing and transportation for the Indians. Enclosed in a government-printed envelope marked "Penalty for private use $300," the letter said the request for support for the demonstrators "is not an official agency function."

The author of the letter was Lynn Miller, co-ordinator of ACTION's former volunteer project. The letter said a number of ACTION staffers would work on their own time during the weekend to help the Indians.

On Tuesday, the Indians rallied at the Washington Monument, showed up an hour late for a meeting with Vice-President Walter Mondale and scheduled a march to the Supreme Court but instead went to the FBI Building.

Irked Police Delay Delivery Of Newspaper

NEW YORK (Reuter) — New York policemen demonstrating against the editorial position of The Daily News held up delivery of the newspaper for an hour Tuesday night.

A story in the newspaper said a paper bag full of water was dropped on demonstrators from the building and hit two off-duty policemen.

A box of soap powder was also dropped but did not hit anybody.

Crew 'Sits In' Until Paid

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 80 crew members aboard the cruise ship SS America are refusing to leave the docked boat until they are paid thousands of dollars in back wages.

In the latest wave of trouble to hit the ship since passengers forced a "Cruise to Nowhere" to turn back on July 1, the crew — many of them Jamaicans who paid their own way here to get the jobs — vowed to stay aboard until they get their money.

A spokesman for Venture Cruise Lines, Inc., which owns the ship, is reported to have told the crew Tuesday that they had to leave by today so the ship could be moved to dry dock for repairs.

"We told him we want the money before we go," said one waiter who said he has been paid only $55 since starting work about three weeks ago. "We don't trust them."

Venture is reported to have offered to fly crew members back to Jamaica and settle accounts there later. Captain John Tourvas said: "The company has made all the arrangements to send all the crewmen back to their countries."

But while Venture's offer was accepted by some crew members after a representative of the Jamaican counsulate visited the ship, other crew members called the offer a "big rip-off."

The ship owners have been ordered to make refunds to about 250 passengers who complained of non-working toilets and other unsanitary conditions, and forced the "Cruise to Nowhere" to turn back.

The vessel also was slapped with customs fines totalling $439,000 after the disrupted cruise, and the U.S. Public Health Service assigned it one of the lowest sanitary ratings ever given a cruise ship.

Trudeau Pitches For Bonn Links

By FRANK RUTTER
Times London Bureau

BONN — Economic links between Canada and Germany are grossly under-developed, Prime Minister Trudeau said here Tuesday night.

Germany and Canada, both among the world's leading trading nations, and each selling a quarter of its gross national product abroad, have less than two per cent of their trade with one another, he told Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, his host at a state dinner.

In a fulsome tribute to Schmidt, who will be his host until Friday, Trudeau made a rather thinly-concealed pitch for some of West Germany's renowned prosperity through trade.

"You probably think of us as suppliers of wheat and wood pulp, of coal and oil and gas, of uranium," Trudeau said.

"You may not recognize us yet for the sophisticated technologies we have derived from our geography and resources."

Trudeau also delivered a shopping list to his host.

These are the things he intimated the Germans should buy from Canada:

Aircraft;

the Candu nuclear reactor;

communications equipment;

mining and farm machinery.

Earlier Tuesday, the prime minister had lunch with a group of leading West German businessmen in Cologne.

He is sending Finance Minister Jean Chretien to meet financial and investment officials privately. And he will spend the next two days in private talks with Schmidt.

"We will want to reflect together on what we and the other participants accomplished at the summit," he said, referring to the economic summit meeting which ended Monday, and how Canada and the Federal Republic can translate these accomplishments into practical benefits of their own relations.

"We count on an even closer partnership with Germany," Trudeau declared.

The prime minister then reeled off the promises that had been made at the summit to improve economic conditions for the major industrial nations of the free world.

He suggested that Canada and Germany could work together through closer commercial links on some of the problems facing the Western economies.

Schmidt, who addressed his guest as Dear Pierre, was also lavish, heaping praise on Canada as a good partner and singling out Trudeau's work at the summit on the anti-hijacking agreement.

"I know, Pierre, you do not think much of magic formulas oriented to day-to-day political business and I fully agree with you," said the West German leader.

Ancient Cross Found

BOULOGNE SUR MER, France (AP) — A bulldozer working on the construction of an underground parking lot uncovered the earliest Christian symbol ever found in northern France.

The symbol, a cruciform monogram carved into a three-pound block of lead, was found on the site of barracks used by sailors of the Roman fleet that controlled the coasts of Britain.

Government archeologist Pierre Leman said the cross dates prior to 275 AD. and is more than 150 years older than any other Christian symbol found along France's English Channel coast.

Suicide Jump

SINGAPORE (AP) — A 29-year-old mother threw her three children out the window of her high-rise apartment, critically injuring all three, then plunged to her death, police said. They said Jagabar Machiyar left a suicide note before heaving her 11-month-old son, his nine-year-old brother and six-year-old sister from the sixth-floor apartment and jumping.

LORDS 'ROGUES AND VANDALS'

LONDON (UPI) — Left-wing Laborite member of parliament Dennis Canavan was expelled from the House of Commons Tuesday night for calling members of the House of Lords "rogues and vandals."

Canavan first charged that Lord Thorneycroft, a former Conservative government minister and present chairman of the Conservative party, once "stole 9 million pounds ($17 million) from the Post Office."

He described members of the House of Lords — the upper house — as "rogues and vandals."

Deputy Speaker Oscar Murton called on Canavan to withdraw the remark "forthwith."

"I was only referring to ancestors of members of the House of Lords," Canavan replied.

Eight times, Murton repeated his order to take back the remark but each time the MP refused. Finally, the deputy speaker ordered him to leave the House.

He did so, accompanied by Labor Party Chief Whip Michael Cocks.

Outside the chamber the deputy sergeant-at-arms and a police sergeant waited in the members' lobby to escort Canavan from the Houses of Parliament. But meantime he had disappeared.

Finally, he was found by Labor's Deputy Chief Whip Walter Harrison in a Commons bar, where he already had been refused a drink.

The Sergeant-at-Arms and the police sergeant then escorted him from the premises.

Fake Rx by Carter MD

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's chief medical adviser wrote a prescription to a fictitious person so a staff employee could obtain the drug Quaalude, but another person who later tried to pick up the drug was arrested, according to the Washington Post.

The Post says police in suburban Prince William County, Va, on July 11 arrested a woman after she attempted to purchase the drug using a prescription allegedly signed by Dr. Peter Bourne.

Dr. Bourne, the president's chief adviser on health and drug abuse, could not be reached for comment early today. The White House declined to comment and a spokesman, Pat Bario, said Bourne would have a statement later.

The newspaper says police were treating the arrest as a routine investigation of prescription forgery, which carries a penalty of one to five years imprisonment in Virginia.

The Post, quoting unidentified informed sources, says Dr. Bourne told police he wrote the prescription to a fictitious person to avoid embarrassing the persons for whom the drug was intended.

Bourne told investigators the person seeking the drug was a woman who worked in his White House office, but she was not further identified, the newspaper adds.

It quotes one source as saying that the woman for whom the prescription was written apparently was too busy to fill it and gave it to the arrested woman to fill for her.

BABY TOSSED INTO WEEDS

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A month-premature baby was tossed naked into dry grass along a rural roadside, where hours later she was found bruised, scratched and covered by ant bites, authorities said.

But officials at Valley Children's Hospital said Tuesday that the little girl, dubbed Jane Doe, was recovering from her injuries and was in good condition.

Sheriff's deputies reported no success in efforts to find the mother, who they believe discarded the child Sunday shortly after birth.

The baby was tossed into grass in the Sierra Nevada foothills south of Fresno, apparently from a car, sheriff's deputies said. Her umbilical cord had not been tied, police said.

Her tiny body covered with ants, she sweltered in the hot sun and dry grass for more than three hours before some young people heard her cries while walking back to their car after fishing nearby.

"We were looking to see if we could find who was crying," said Maria Leal, 19, of Delano. "I never expected to see a little baby there on the ground. She was very small and she didn't have any clothes on at all."

Amnesty In Peru

LIMA (UPI) — Peru's military government Tuesday night granted a sweeping amnesty to all people convicted and sentenced for political offenses or accused of such crimes.

The decree followed a day of violent protests in downtown Lima in support of a 10-week teachers' strike.

One public school teacher was hit in the head by a tear gas cannister during the demonstration and was reported seriously injured.

Scientists Probe Dioxin Threat

ALSEA, Ore. (UPI) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency plans to look into complaints that a series of miscarriages may have been the result of exposure to herbicides containing dioxin.

The agency will send a team of epidemiologists to look into the complaint, even though a federal official said there was only a small chance the investigation would find a relationship between the miscarriages and the herbicide spraying.

Bonnie Hill, spokeswoman for the group that requested the probe, said she and seven of her neighbors have suffered a total of 11 miscarriages in the spring months starting in 1973.

She said she had charted the dates of miscarriages experienced by some women in her area against the dates the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service and two private timber companies have sprayed with 2,4,-5-T and Silvex, both herbicides which contain dioxin. She said each of the eight women was under care of a physician during pregnancies, and added that none of the doctors could offer an explanation for the miscarriages.

Michael Watson of the EPA regional office in Seattle said extensive testing was conducted after one of the eight women contacted the EPA early this year. Watson said his agency found the miscarriages were not related to toxic effects of herbicides, but were probably due to genetic causes.

'I Can't Look On My Husband As a Man. . .'

NEW YORK — "I wanted so much to have a baby," Mrs. Doris Del Zio sobbed, recalling how her hope of having the world's first test-tube baby was dashed five years ago when an experiment involving a human embryo was halted at Manhattan's Columbia Presbyterian Medical Centre.

"I can't believe I understand what happened in 1973," she told a packed courtroom in U.S. District Court Tuesday, where her $1.5 million damage suit is being tried.

Mrs. Del Zio and her husband, John, a 59-year-old dentist, allege the hospital and Dr. Raymond Vande Wiele, its chief of obstetrics and gynecology, "maliciously and arbitrarily" destroyed a laboratory-fertilized embryo that was to be implanted in her womb.

Mrs. Del Zio, often in tears, testified that since 1973 she has lived in constant pain and mental anguish and her once "extremely active and enjoyable" sex life virtually has been destroyed.

After the experiment was stopped, she said, "I could not look at my husband as a man. I thought sex had become a mockery of our relationship."

For about six months, Mrs. Del Zio continued, she had no sex with her husband, who has two daughters by a previous marriage. Sex, she said, is now "very infrequent, once a month or once every two months."

She told of an incident in Fort Lauderdale in 1974 when she regained consciousness after fainting in a department store and "found all around me and in my arms were baby clothes.

"I ran to my car and I was screaming to myself why on earth would I be doing this."

Mrs. Del Zio also said she has recurring dreams of a baby wrapped in a blanket with animal prints, crying.

"I was a cheerful and outgoing person until this," she said. "Now I don't want to be around children anymore. I don't want to be in crowds of people. I still hope that one day there will be found a way for me to have a baby."

White Is White And Black Is Sent To Prison

JOHANNESBURG — A black gardener was sentenced Tuesday to six months in prison for sending his white employer's daughter a love letter.

In sentencing Paul Moschew, 24, Magistrate F. Van Reenen said: "It is a disgrace for you to have done such a thing."

The woman said the note made her feel cheap — "more especially because it was sent by a bantu (black)."

Drunken Capote Senses Doom

NEW YORK — Writer Truman Capote, appearing here Tuesday on a television talk-show drunk and incoherent, said that he would probably end up killing himself accidentally.

The author, guest speaker on ABC's Stanley Siegel show, mentioned his friends Marilyn Monroe and Montgomery Clift, whose deaths were attributed to drug overdoses. He mumbled that he also expected to kill himself accidentally.

As Capote began speaking, he explained that he "had been boozing and taking drugs" for about two days straight.

He said he was suffering from anxiety.

Capote, who was scheduled to appear for an hour, remained on the program for about 30 minutes.

This Baby Will Never Know Its Father

LONDON — A baby born to a prostitute — who was paid to have the child by a childless couple — should never know who his father was, three judges have ruled.

The couple allegedly paid the girl $5,400 to have the man's child by artificial insemination, but when the child was born the prostitute became so attached to it she refused to part with it.

A court last month ruled the father should be allowed to see the child once every two weeks, but the three-man Appeal Court overruled that decision and said the baby boy, now 13 months old, should never be told the truth.

"He could be told that his father died at sea or something of that sort," said Lord Justice Stamp.

A lawyer acting for the child said further visits by the father, who doted on the child, "could only lead to disaster."

She cited class differences as one obstacle, saying: "The two families are poles apart." The mother comes from a cockney working-class district of east London whereas the father is a middle-class professional man living in suburbia.

"As long as the father is in the picture of the child's life it becomes that much more difficult for this young lady to put that moment of error totally behind her," Lord Justice Cumming-Bruce said.

JAPANESE JETS ADD SLEEPERS TO FIRST CLASS

NARITA, Japan (UPI) — Japan Air Lines Boeing 747s on long international flights will offer beds in the first-class lounges starting next month, the airline has announced.

The "sky sleeper" service is designed exclusively for first-class passengers, Hisashi Itoh, general manager for international passenger marketing and sales, said Monday.

Itoh said JAL is installing five beds in each of it jumbo jets and first class passengers on transpacific routes can make reservations beginning Thursday for flights after Aug. 1.

The conversion of the first class lounge to the sleeping facility is chiefly aimed at increasing profitability of first class, he said.

Passengers wanting to use the beds will pay an extra $175 from Tokyo to the U.S. West Coast.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the reasons that many players have forsaken rubber bridge in favor of duplicate bridge is that they had spent countless hours losing rubber after rubber because they never held an opening bid; and the opponents kept on bidding and making game after game and slam after slam.

So they turned to duplicate bridge, where everybody plays the identical deals, and scoring is on a relative basis, and where a tournament can be won by a pair which, during an evening, never held an opening bid. In switching to duplicate, they escaped the aggravation of saying nothing but "pass" during an entire session of play. But they acquired other aggravations, like worrying about making an overtrick, or preventing the opposition from making an overtrick, etc.

In today's deal, which was played in a duplicate game, if our South declarer had been one of those persons who had given up rubber bridge for duplicate, he probably would have entertained thoughts of going back to rubber bridge.

Both sides vulnerable.
West deals.

	NORTH ♠ Q964 ♡ — ◇ KQJ872 ♣ 954
WEST ♠ 5 ♡ AK93 ◇ A93 ♣ AKJ87		EAST ♠ 8 ♡ Q108752 ◇ 6 ♣ Q10632
	SOUTH ♠ AKJ10732 ♡ J64 ◇ 1054 ♣ —

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	1 ◇	Pass	4 ♠
Dble.	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	5 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dble.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

East passed on the first round of bidding because he didn't know how many clubs to bid, and he felt that he would have another chance to bid. When West doubled South's four-spade call, East now showed his club support. North, undaunted by West's double of four spades, bid five spades, which West doubled.

With the heart opening lead, South's only loser was a diamond to West's ace. So he scored an overtrick, for a total of 1,050 points. South, of course, was quite pleased with the result — until all the scores were posted at the end of the session.

Every other North-South pair but one had arrived at a six-spade contract, sacrificing against East-West's six-club or six-heart bid. And each declarer had fulfilled that contract, for a score of 1,660 points (no West defender led the ace and a second diamond).

As was stated, duplicate bridge has it aggravations.

Charlie looked up from his paper. "It's funny about our ages," he said. "It just hit me."

"Funny?" Linda replied. "I won't think it funny when I'm your age."

"The prime of life!" Charlie chuckled. "But if you reverse the order of the digits of my age you get five less than twice the square of my actual first digit. And exactly the same goes for you."

How old was Linda?

Don't Hold Your Breath Lower Beef Prices To Stay

The price of beef is down 10 cents a pound wholesale in Victoria but it's only temporary.

The price is still 20 cents a pound higher than it was three months ago and further increases are on the way.

"There is a levelling of the beef price at the moment," said Rick Fisher, manager of Glenwood Meats.

"With people away on holidays and with the weather being so hot there is little demand for freezer beef. The price will rise when the holidays end and the demand picks up."

Spokesmen for Canada Safeway and Woodward's food stores said beef prices have been cut at the retail level to reflect the lower wholesale price.

However, the president of the B.C. Cattlemen's Association confirmed the break for consumers will not last.

"The price has just levelled temporarily," said Dave Merz of Vancouver.

Merz said the price of beef will continue to rise in the coming months though probably not as sharply as during the spring. He said three years of depressed prices caused many cattlemen to cut herds, creating the shortages that have resulted in rising prices.

Safeway spokesman Georgina Hammond of Vancouver would not speculate on how long the lower prices will remain in effect but Woodward's spokesman Pat Keough of Vancouver predicted the reductions will last two or three weeks.

At Safeway, the lower beef prices apply to all cuts except regular hamburger and loin steak and at Woodward's, all cuts except loin.

Independent butchers said their prices on cheaper cuts of beef have declined or will drop this week by up to 20 cents a pound. They said, however, that retail prices could fluctuate from week to week as new shipments arrive.

Some butcher shops are keeping their beef prices the same.

A spokesman for one butcher shop said his beef prices will basically remain the same although some cuts, such as cross-rib, chuck steaks and hamburger, will go down.

The spokesman said he can't afford to offer an across-the-board decrease in beef prices because his wholesale cost for beef, which dropped six cents a pound last week, is expected to go back up two cents next week.

The lower beef prices this week in some Victoria stores follow a trend in parts of Ontario, where prices have dropped up to 20 cents a pound.

New Offer Of Bonds Aug. 15

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien says the federal government plans an issue of marketable Government of Canada bonds on Aug. 15.

The announcement came a day after a Toronto securities house estimated that federal cash requirements for the current fiscal year could be as high as $12.5 billion, $1 billion more than previous government projections for the year.

The firm, Dominion Securities Ltd., said $800 million of the increase might arise from funds required to finance the federal share of retail sales tax cuts announced in the April 10 budget.

ELIMINATE WINTER TIRE CHANGEOVER
Announcing Tiempo: The All Season Steel Belted Radial
Tiempo—a new kind of tire for all seasons. Just think—you may never have to put on or take off winter tires again.
Radial ply polyester cord body helps provide sidewall strength, flexibility and a smooth ride. Radial construction saves you money on gasoline compared to bias-ply tires.
Two rugged belts of steel cord help minimize wear, bruising and penetrations in the critical tread area season after season.
The tread rubber is specially compounded to give you traction even on glare ice. Without studs. How? The tread rubber maintains flexibility, and traction, at temperatures well below freezing.
Scuff Bar, another Goodyear extra. This built-in scuff bar helps protect the whitewalls from curb and scuff damage.
Over 10,000 biting edges give Tiempo traction and pull on ice and snow. Tiempo meets R.M.A. standards as a snow tire. Yet on dry pavement, the unique centre "whisper" rib design suppresses noise for a smooth, quiet ride.
Now you can buy an all season radial tire that gives you the smooth quiet ride of a summer radial and handles winter snow and ice like a snow tire. Just think, you may never have to go to the expense or trouble of changing over to winter tires again.
Tiempo, a new kind of tire for every kind of weather.
See us now for this great new tire from Goodyear.

Dogs in a blanket can be dressed up on the outside with sesame seeds

Tried Dogs in a Blanket?

FOOD & nutrition

Fun to fix, neat to eat, and great for the grill, they're a twist on that old favorite — the hot dog on a bun. You'll love them too, because they're practically an all-in-one meal.

(An optional dress-up is the addition of sesame seeds on the outside.).

Just serve with raw carrot sticks or radish circles alongside, and you're all set.

In addition to preparing a quick, economical meal, you'll also be providing a nutritious one too. Just two hot dogs supply one-third of a child's daily requirement of protein and one-fourth of the adult daily requirement. Hot dogs also contain iron, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, phosphorus, zinc, Vitamin C, Vitamin B6 and Vitamin B12.

DOGS IN A SESAME BLANKET

2 4-oz. packages wiener-wrap
5 hot dogs
1 oz. Colby Cheese
2½ slices of a medium onion
1 large dill pickle (cut into 5 equal portions)
1½ teaspons chili sauce
Sesame seeds (optional)

Open wiener-wrap packages and unfold. Press alternate seams together, making 5 wraps. Slice hot dogs down the centre (but not all the way through). Cut Colby cheese into julienne strips and place in the centre of each hot dog. Top with a long julience slice of onion and strip of dill pickle.

Brush inside of wiener-wrap with chili sauce and fold wrap over stuffed hot dogs, pinching dough to seal. Sprinkle wiener-wrap with water and dip into sesame seeds. Grill over medium coals (about 6 inches from the source of heat) turning several times for about 25 minutes or until sesame seeds are toasted and dough is nicely browned.

Yield: five servings.

Veggie Cooking an Art

tiny bennett

The major area where most cooks fail is the cooking of vegetables. This is a neglected art, which is terrible, since they contain minerals and vitamins essential to good health.

The folks of the East are fully aware of these values, so they cut vegetables carefully, give them minimal cooking and serve them crisp and succulent in lovely color patterns that rejoice the eye. There are few more satisfying dishes than a bowl of stir-fried Chinese vegetables with its crunchy appeal and with all the vitamins and minerals intact.

Most Western cooks use far too much heat for far too long in preparing vegetables — and then most of the time the nutrient is thrown away with the water.

My mother was horrified at the very thought of throwing away water in which greens had been cooked. She either poured the water into the stockpot, or used it as the liquid added to the gravy from the meat. And so from an early age I learned how to cook these items that form a must in everyday diets.

The real secret is simple and easy to follow: The very minimum of water must be used in the shortest possible cooking time.

My normal system for cooking all green vegetables calls for barely a quarter-inch of water in the pot. This is brought to the rolling boil and the vegetables put in and a tight-fitting lid clamped on to prevent flavor and food values from wafting out in the steam.

With cabbage wedges, after a minute or two I lightly-season with ground salt and pepper and cover again. After 10 minutes, I drain all the water off into my stock-pot, lower the heat, add a big dab of butter and a sprinkle of celery seeds. The lid is replaced and the pot shaken from time to time. I have friends who only eat cabbage in my home and refuse it cooked any other way.

Green beans and peas respond beautifully to similar treatment but with varied herbs. I add mint to peas with the salt and white pepper and, after two minutes, drain, add a teaspoon of sugar, a little butter and keep shaking to glaze them and to allow them to finish cooking in their own water content. To green beans I add salt and pepper, a dash of oregano and a smidgin of parsley.

Spinach calls for a different system. After carefully washing and picking out withered leaves, I drain it in a collander and then, using no water at all, dump it in the pot, fix the lid tight and cook gently over a medium heat that uses the high water content of this fine vegetable as cooking liquid. This dish is again seasoned lightly and a knob of butter added.

A superb way to cook spinach is with broiled fish. Here I butter the broiler pan, pile in washed spinach, cover with the fish and drizzle a mix of butter and white wine over all. The dish is cooked in the top of the oven at 475 for 10 minutes, turning the fish once and drizzling more wine-butter and then finishing off under the broiler for two to three minutes each side, depending on the thickness of the fish. Try that on your jaded taste buds and people who say they don't like spinach.

My favorite western way of cooking cauliflower is to get the buds all equal in size and steam in a collander over boiling water or stock with a lid clamped down to keep in flavor. When it is still crispy, it can be put in a broiler dish pre-buttered, dotted with butter, sprinkled with grated cheese and browned under the broiler.

For an eastern-style cauliflower dish, get the buds all the same size so they cook evenly, pour a little light oil in a skillet and stir-fry, keeping them on the move all the time. Sprinkle with a little MSG, salt and white pepper, add a cup of clear chicken stock and cook covered for no more than three minutes and thicken the sauce with cornstarch.

Carrots are one of our oldest cultivated vegetables and extremely rich in valuable vitamins and minerals. They are delicious raw, and can be magnificent when cooked with care. I cover with water boiling from the kettle to blanch and when the water returns to the boil, I drain and put them back in the pot with just enough chicken stock to cover the bottom. Seasoned with salt, pepper and dill seeds, plus that knob of butter, they should be shaken up regularly and cooked until fork tender but with crunchy innards.

All vegetable cookery should be organized in this way with a minimum of liquid and cooking time. Avoid paring when possible but scrub with a hard nylon brush — I keep a nail brush exclusively for this purpose.

And don't throw those food values down the sink — it is as sensible as throwing away baby with the bath water.

We should all take more care in the cooking of vegetables, because they are among the most heathful foods that we eat.

(This was the last column written by Tiny Bennett prior to his death last month).

RACK OF LAMB . . . SPECIAL

By PIERRE FRANEY

If I were to name the one dish that is, where quick-cooking is concerned, the most elegant and sophisticated, it would probably be the dish outlined here. It is a rack of lamb that is cooked under the broiler to the desired degree of doneness. It is a dish that would be equally suitable at a formal dinner or at a special dinner for two of four to celebrate an occasion.

There is no denying the fact that it is a preparation that is elevated not only where taste is the measure but price as well. But there are times when champagne can be the choice over a still wine, the main course something a bit more special than the favorite family casserole.

At its most basic, a broiled rack of lamb consists of simply rubbing the meat — bones in, of course — with salt and pepper and oil. The meat is cooked under a broiler, turned to high heat, for approximately five minutes, fat side down. The rack is turned and cooked on the other side five minutes. Then the rack should be left to "rest" with the broiler off for an additional five minutes.

Brush briefly with butter, and that's all there is to it. If you want to add embellishments, as indicated below, rub the meat with rosemary and, at the end, sprinkle with parsley.

There is one vastly important consideration in the preparation of this — most of the surface fat should be cut away, leaving only a light coating, before broiling.

Racks of lamb should be cooked until rare and served. Overcooking will seriously impair the flavor and texture. Serve, if desired, with rice and peas, which should be cooked before the lamb is put under the broiler.

RACKS OF LAMB WITH ROSEMARY

2 Racks of lamb, about 2 pounds each
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 Tablespoon rosemary leaves
1 Tablespoon olive oil
1 Tablespoon butter
1 Tablespoon chopped parsley.

1. Using a sharp chef's knife and the fingers, cut and pull away all but a thin layer of top fat.
2. Sprinkle the lamb all over with salt and pepper.
3. Crush the rosemary barely and rub it all over the lamb.
4. Sprinkle the lamb all over with the olive oil.
5. Pre-heat the broiler to high.
6. Place the lamb fat side down on a rack. Place under the broiler so that the ribs of lamb are about four inches from the source of heat. Cook five minutes.
7. Turn the lamb fat side up and return to the broiler once more, about four inches from the source of heat. Broil five minutes. Turn the oven off and leave the door open. Let the meat stand five minutes before serving. Before serving, rub the lamb with the butter and sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Quick Bread Never Boring

hilda beastall

A loaf of good wholewheat bread never becomes boring any more than does a well flavored potato, reason enough that both foods have been considered staples in north temperate zones for generations.

But this is no reason why we should not present the family with a loaf of bread in a different form, or add something different to the same recipe when we make our own.

Years ago there were a variety of bread shapes to choose from in bakery stores — there was a four-cornered Coburg loaf, the four squarish corners being easily detachable like extra buns placed on the square base of dough before baking. These were always sort of prize pieces — crusty, flavorful, and delicious.

Another shape was called Cottage Loaf, a small circular loaf baked on the top of a larger round base. With this loaf, small slices were cut from the top piece, and larger adult sizes from the bottom. I doubt whether pans were used for these loaves, so that today we can duplicate these shapes by making a stiff yeast dough and kneading it into desired shapes to bake on flat cookie trays.

Brush the dough all around with a greased pastry brush or a wad of waxed paper dipped in softened margarine to make a soft crust; or use beaten egg and a little water applied in the same way for a hard crust.

My favorite Quick Batter Bread recipe plus more flour is used for a delicious luncheon bread flavored lightly with cheese and onion. More of these two ingredients are added if a pronounced flavor is wanted. As it is given here, the bread is suitable for anyone to enjoy with only the lightest flavor coming through.

One half the recipe makes Cheese and Onion Loaf, the remaining half is made into a Fruit and Nut Roll, equally delicious.

QUICK BATTER BREAD
(with additional flour for kneading)

- ¼ cup warm water
- 1 tsp sugar
- 1 Tbsp granular yeast or 1 pkt
- 2 Tbsp soft margarine
- 1 Tbsp brown sugar
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 cup (generous) hot water
- ⅓ cup skim milk powder
- 2 small eggs
- 1½ cups wholewheat flour
- ⅓ cup soy flour
- 1½ cups unbleached flour plus 1 cup extra of mixed flours (approx.)

Measure warm water into large warm mixing bowl. Stir in 1 tsp. sugar. Sprinkle yeast on surface and let stand 10 minutes until smooth and puffy.

Meanwhile into small bowl, measure margarine, sugar, salt, hot water and milk powder; stir until dissolved; cool to about same temperature as yeast mixture. Add eggs; beat with wooden spoon, then add egg-margarine mixture to yeast mixture.

Beat well.

Measure flours into another bowl, and add half the flour mixture to the liquid, beating with spoon for 100 times to make smooth. Add remainder of first flour mixture, still beating as well as possible; this will be a stiff batter. Divide batter into two bowls.

To make Cheese and Onion Loaf to one bowl add 1 Tbsp chopped fresh chives and ¼ cup grated Cheddar cheese, stir and mix well. Now gradually add as much of the extra mixed flours as is needed to shape into a loaf using the spoon and one hand for kneading in the bowl. Form into a round. Place on greased flat cookie tray. Set aside.

Now make Fruit and Nut Roll. To second bowl of batter dough, add more of the extra mixed flours until dough is stiff enough to knead in the bowl with spoon and hand. Turn out on a floured wax paper; pat and roll into a rectangle.

Sprinkle with a few currants, cut dates, raisins, ground nuts and one teaspoon of sugar, keeping fruit to about one inch of edges of the dough.

Roll up, beginning from one long side, making a not too tight roll. Pinch edges together.

Place on greased cookie sheet with sealed edge down. The same cookie sheet should take the two loaves, but use whatever you have.

Into cold oven place the two loaves, using the bottom rack if that is the less heated in your oven. Turn on to gentle heat at about 30 to 35 deg. C. (about 95 deg. F.). When loaves have risen to about half the desired height, turn heat off, leave breads in while they rise to double the original size.

Then turn on heat to hot 219 deg. C. for 10 minutes to stop further rising, then at once down to normal moderate baking temperature of 177 deg. C. for about another 15 to 20 minutes.

Prevent scorching by covering tops loosely with foil, if this seems necessary, but they should be a good color.

When baked through, the loaves should sound hollow to rapping with knuckles. Remove the loaf and the roll at once to a wire rack for cooling.

Both are delicious when enjoyed while still warm, but are good in a different way cold with a little Cheddar or soft Wensleydale cheese as a special treat for lunches with green salads.

The Quick Batter Bread with the extra cup or so of mixed flours for kneading makes one elegant shaped loaf when spooned into a very well greased and floured fluted aluminum mould or into a 10-inch aluminum tube pan. Raise the bread by starting it in cold oven as described above.

This method saves fuel, especially if some other food item is prepared for baking in same oven heat when temperature is turned up to normal baking setting.

A substitute for a tube pan is to place an inverted pyrex custard cup in the middle of a large round casserole or other round baking dish or pan. Grease well and dust lightly with flour to ensure easy removal of bread.

Give bread a new interest at meal time — make it at home and occasionally make it into new shapes with new flavors.

YOU CAN ORDER THEM

"Yes, but where can you buy sweetbreads in Victoria"? was the question several readers asked after last Wednesday's Times food pages gave several recipes for this most delectable of variety meats.

Sweetbreads are brought into Victoria primarily for the restaurant trade and meat markets don't stock them as a rule due to lack of demand. But most markets in town will get them for you if you order in advance.

Normally an order placed in the morning will produce sweetbreads by afternoon.

However, with several of the large packinghouses in a strike-lockout situation the supply is low and orders should be placed at least two days in advance of need.

How Do Vegetarians Get Sufficient B-12?

Food for Thought

By DR. JEAN MAYER and DR. JOHANNA DWYER

Q. I am a vegetarian and am becoming increasingly concerned about the amount of Vitamin B-12 I get. Some people say that the only non-meat source of B-12 is eggs; others say both dairy products and eggs are good sources. What is correct, and how can we vegetarians be sure of getting all the B-12 we need?

A. On a daily basis, adults need only minute amounts of B-12 — about 3 micrograms a day to be precise. And fortunately B-12 does occur in both eggs and dairy products. A single egg contains 1 microgram and so does a cup of fresh whole or skim milk. An ounce of Swiss cheese or a quarter-cup of cottage cheese contains a half a microgram. Cheddar cheese has a little less. From these figures, you can readily see how lacto-ovo vegetarians can get all the vitamin B-12 they need.

We should point out, however, that the form of vitamin B-12 found in most food is vulnerable to heat and light. As a result, a lot is lost when the food is processed. For example, yogurt contains only about a quarter microgram per cup and evaporated milk somewhat less. And dried skim milk contains almost no B-12 at all.

So if you depend heavily on dried skim milk, you may want to do a rough estimate of the other B-12-containing foods you consume to make sure you're getting enough. If you have any doubt, then a multivitamin supplement that contains B-12 would be a good idea. In fact, it's a must for vegetarians who eat no animal products.

By the way, contrary to popular belief, yeast, which is a good source of other B complex vitamins, contains no B-12.

Q. In a recent column you reported the results of a study in which loss of weight had a dramatic effect on reducing high blood pressure — even in individuals who had not responded well to drug therapy. You didn't mention the matter of salt restriction, however. Aren't people with hypertension supposed to restrict their salt intake?

A. They certainly should. Fortunately, persons suffering from hypertension no longer need to follow the very low sodium diets that once were an essential part of the treatment.

It has been shown, however, that the effectiveness of drug therapy is enhanced when the amount of sodium you take in is cut to about two grams a day. This can be done by eliminating such obviously salty foods as ham, bacon, pickles, prepared mustard, relish, potato chips, pretzels and a number of other processed foods. (You can get a complete list of other foods from your local Heart Association with a written request from your doctor.)

The reason sodium restriction was not included in the study we wrote about is that the researchers were interested in studying the effects of a single variable — that is, loss of weight — on hypertension. The results of their study confirmed the fact that dieting is, indeed, a powerful weapon for hypertensives.

Weighing Economy vs. Nutrition

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

DEAR RUTH AND ZAK:

My family is in the middle income bracket, so I don't have to pinch pennies when it comes to groceries, but neither can I afford to throw money out the window. Perhaps you could help me answer several questions based on economy versus nutrition.

(1) Does it make sense to buy safflower oil in the health food store at 15c an ounce, when you can buy peanut, sunflower, soya or corn oil in the supermarket for half the price or less? Do you recommend cold-pressed oil?

(2) If an oil is hydrogenated, must it be marked on the label?

(3) Does it make sense to spend 40c a pound for stone ground whole wheat flour without preservatives, as opposed to 25c a pound for ordinary whole wheat flour which you can buy in the supermarket?

(4) Pasta is the one item I serve my family that is made from white flour. To make up for loss of vitamins, I sprinkle toasted wheat germ on top. Is this adequate compensation? Or would it make sense to buy whole wheat or vegetable pasta at $1.00 a pound, as opposed to the usual variety which is 35c a pound or less?

I am willing to spend what is necessary to get the possible nutrition for my family, but do want to make sure that money is wisely spent. — G.B., WILLOWDALE, ONT.

DEAR G.B.:

Yours is one of an increasing number of letters we receive from readers who are anxious to get nutritional value for their food dollars. It is the best way to beat the rising cost of food.

We are answering your questions in the order you have put them to us:

(1) No, it does not make sense to buy safflower oil in the health food store at twice or more the cost of other oils such as corn, sunflower, peanut or soy. All these oils are high in their content of polyunsaturated fatty acids and are low in their content of saturated fatty acids, which makes them desirable to include in the diet for the purpose of controlling blood cholesterol. In addition to using the right kind of oil, it is essential to keep the amount of fat and oil in the diet low, by avoiding frying many of your foods.

Presumably, the oils sold in health food stores are cold-pressed and less refined than those sold in supermarkets. This may mean that they are higher in their content of vitamin E. There is no evidence of vitamin E deficiency in Canada. So, even if the oils sold in health food stores were richer in vitamin E, the price difference will favor the oils in the supermarkets.

(2) By law, if an oil is hydrogenated, even partially, it should be so labelled. So, the label, and particularly the list of ingredients on foods should tell you whether or not the oil added is or is not hydrogenated. The hydrogenating of an oil increases the level of saturated fatty acids. Saturated fatty acids are less desirable than polyunsaturated fatty acids for those who wish to control the level of their blood cholesterol.

(3) No, it doesn't make sense to spend 40c for a pound of stone-ground whole wheat flour when the ordinary 100% whole wheat flour in the supermarket is selling for 25c or less a pound. It is possible that the stone ground product sold in health food stores will contain more wheat germ than the one sold in the supermarket. The amount will not exceed an ounce of wheat germ for each pound of flour. You would be further ahead buying wheat germ and adding it to your diet. It will never cost more than 15c an ounce (we should not try to predict food prices in this day and age!) which is the difference between the prices of the two flours.

You may wonder about the preservatives in supermarket whole-wheat flour. Judging from the list of preservatives allowed by law, and from what we know about their safety, we have no fears or reservations about their use. So, their pesence or absence should not be a factor in you buying decision.

(4) From a nutritional point of view, the white flour pasta at 35c or less a pound is a better buy than the whole wheat or vegetable pasta at $1.00 a pound. If this is the only item you serve your family that is made from white flour and you sprinkle wheat germ on top, you needn't worry about the difference in nutritional value between them.

Buy toasted wheat germ. Toasting kills the enzymes that might cause rancidity and destroy part of the vitamin E. Keep wheat germ refrigerated for better preservation of its nutritional value. Of course, you should make sure that the wheat germ you buy is not 'defatted', as some brands are. Defatted wheat germ is always so labelled. The removal of fat will also mean the removal of the fat-soluble vitamin E. Since you are conscious of the nutritional value of your food dollar, toasted wheat germ is certainly a better nutritional buy than 'defatted' wheat germ.

DEAR RUTH AND ZAK:

I have some questions for which I have been unable to find answers, although I have consulted several books on nutrition:

(1) How does All Bran fare against a cereal like Bran Flakes as far as fibre is concerned? I had thought that All Bran would be more nutritious, but according to the nutrients listed on the cereal box, this is not so. Does this mean the fibre content is also greater in Bran Flakes?

(2) Will cereal taken sparingly at different times during the day benefit me as well as one cup of cereal taken all at once? I am thinking of the habit of sprinkling All Bran over cottage cheese and salads taken during the day (a couple of tablespoons of All Bran at a time), to the extent of about ¼ or ½ cup a day.

(3) Is there such a thing as the recommended daily requirement for fibre? — M.P., KIRKLAND, QUEBEC.

DEAR M.P.:

(1) Judging by the information given on the cereal boxes, All Bran contains more fibre than Bran Flakes. We realize that it is difficult to find this information on the label, but the fibre content is listed under the heading 'carbohydrate' and the values are given per ounce and per 100 grams.

While All Bran contains more fibre, both cereals are nutritious. You certainly should not feel that one is greatly different from the other.

(2) As far as we know, there should be no difference between taking a fibre-rich cereal all at once or in small doses, sprinkled on various foods throughout the day. In fact, we see nothing wrong in taking a cup of bran cereal in the morning and prinkling a couple of tablespoons on other foods, to the extend of additional ¼ or ½ cup a day.

(3) There is no recommended level of intake for fibre in the Canadian Dietary Standard. Nutritionists have yet to learn more about fibre so that a specific recommendation could be made. A rule of thumb may be that about 4 grams of fibre are needed per 1,000 calories. So, an adult or a teenager consuming 2,000 calories-worth of food, may have 8 grams of fibre.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: As a marriage and family counselor, I am disturbed by her response to MOM, who complained because her 17-year-old daughter displayed "affection" for her boyfriend in public.

While I agree there are certain forms of affection that are inappropriate to demonstrate in public, holding hands and putting arms around each other's waists are not only appropriate to my view, they are warm, lovely sights to see.

An appropriate show of affection is essential to our physical and emotional well-being. I believe that one of the problems in our society today is that there is not enough touching. We are progressively alienating ourselves from each other, and that is why we marriage counsellors are so busy seeing people who desperately want to know how to make contact with others.

L.A. MARRIAGE COUNSELLOR

DEAR COUNSELLOR: MOM asked me to get the message across to her daughter that it is extremely poor taste for a girl to let a boy "put his hands all over her" in public.

I replied: "All the world may love a lover, but he doesn't have to act his role out in public. A boy who respects a girl will keep his hands OFF her in public, and a girl who respects herself will make sure he does."

Holding hands is a far cry from letting a boy put his hands all over her, which, I repeat, is highly inappropriate in public.

DEAR ABBY: I am just about ready to blow my stack. My husband and I gave his parents a key to our house so that they could check on it when we are out of town, although we seldom are. They live near us, so it is handy for them to drop in often. Now when they come over, they never knock or ring the bell, they just let themselves in with the key they have. They come into our home whether we are home or not.

What's the solution?

HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Ask your husband to ask his parents to please knock or ring the doorbell when they visit, and to use the key only to "check the house" when you are out of town.

And if they continue to ignore your wishes, the solution is obvious — change the locks.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BUBBA: You may be able to dodge your responsibilities, but you can't dodge the consequences of dodging your responsibilities. Think about it.

Mineral Need Acute

your health

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I take a lot of vitamins. I understand something about them, but I don't understand the value of the minerals listed on the label of the bottle. Why are minerals so important? — Miss J.S.

Dear Miss J. S.:

There is a sensible relationship between body fluids and their mineral content. This is known as the "electrolyte balance" and is one of the most remarkable mechanisms in the entire body.

Under normal healthy circumstances, there is a vast communication between all the organs of the body in order to keep this balance intact. Hormone-secreting glands (endocrine glands) play an important role in this phenomenon. When this balance is disturbed, it may be responsible for all kinds of organ dysfunction.

After operations, electrolytes in the blood are carefuly followed. The retention and excretion of fluids must be controlled. When there is a loss of fluid by vomiting or diarrhea, a temporary imbalance may occur between minerals and fluids. Severe burns and chronic kidney disease also readily affect the balance. Physicians depend on detailed studies of the chemistry of the blood to replenish lost minerals.

Under normal circumstances, an adequate, nourishing diet supplies all the minerals necessary for good health. Many people on weight-reducing diets, especially those who are taking "water pills," lose a great deal of potassium, a most valuable mineral for sustained health. This must be replenished, or metabolic dysfunction can occur.

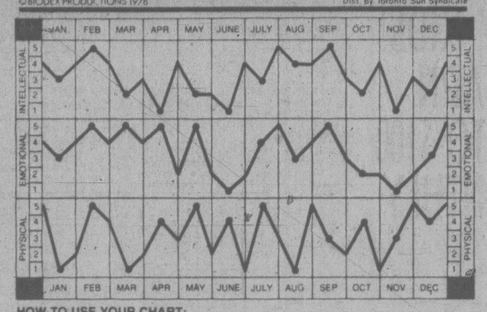
Calcium, iron, sodium, magnesium and phosphorous are but a few of the minerals involved in the complex process of electrolyte balance.

Bio-dex

July 20/78 By Ken J. Michaels

Your computerized biorhythm

©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978 Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- Keep your charge card out of sight. Temptation to spend madly is near.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- You need to think about a lesson you learned as a child.. the advice is still true.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Expect star billing for an outstanding act. It will compliment that "top of the world" feeling!

If your emotional Bio-dex is high you may be sending out all sorts of warm messages without being aware of them. Despite problems and preoccupations, your emotions are doing their own thing, sending out nice, pleasing vibes that bring out the goodheartedness of those around you. Smile — and the world smiles back at you!

SMALL CAN SOMETIMES MEAN BIG
CAMPBELL RIVER OPPORTUNITY
Most people think that living in a small city or town means limited earning potential. This is NOT true with Kem Manufacturing.

Kem is a 25-year-old manufacturer of industrial specialty chemicals that has "big" earners in both large and small cities. Because our broad line of quality products are used in industrial, institutional, municipal and commercial markets, our salespeople's income depends upon their effort and ability ... not where they live. Our average earnings for our salesmen in Canada was $24,810.00.

We are looking for a person with the drive and ambition to develop a territory that will provide at least $20,000 to $25,000 in the first year and increase it substantially in succeeding years. We offer a generous drawing account of up to $300 per week against an excellent commission arrangement which is paid in full monthly, and a fine fringe benefit package to protect you and your family.

If you're looking for a fine opportunity that you thought wouldn't exist for someone living in a small town, and you've been considering moving back, let's get together and talk. Phone:

Redhot-Poker Adds Warmth

Redhot-pokers may well be favorites in the garden for they add light and warmth from earliest summer until almost Thanksgiving. Perhaps you know them as Torch-lily, or by the old name of Tritoma but they are now correctly Kniphofia commemorating a German Professor of Medicine, Johan Kniphof.

By whichever name they may be known, these plants are useful in the labor-free garden, for once established with space allowed for expansion this is one of several perennials which do not need lifting for division each year or so. A plant may stay for 10 or 15 years in the one place if not crowded.

When first planted, a Redhot-poker plant consists of a clump of long narrow grass-like leaves and a mass of fleshy roots. Early September is a good time to plant, while the warm soil encourages new feeding roots to form and fall rains will take care of watering after the soaking at planting time.

The old leaves help to protect the crown of the plant during winter and prevent frost from damaging newly forming leaves. In spring as new leaves reach about eight-inch height and no longer run the risk of frost damage, old ones may be cut off close to soil level.

By May a thick spike of greenish buds will be seen in the central growth of leaves, providing a sizable clump was chosen. Almost in a few days the stem has reached about three feet of height just about the time we look for hummingbirds to arrive.

These tiny birds find the slender yellow and orange flower bells a source of sweet nectar and probably tiny insects which also are attracted.

Hummingbirds need quantities of natural sugar and protein to maintain the high energy of their tiny bodies. I have seen them visiting the flower pokers repeatedly when they first arrive in the garden.

Tubular flowers are a favorite apparently, for these active little birds will some years spend a week between Redhot-pokers and Honeysuckle flowers before passing on elsewhere for nesting.

When Kniphofias become well established by developing new sections of growth from the base of the original plant, there is still little or no die-back. This means the plant goes on expanding in size, producing more imposing flower spikes each year.

Home gardeners ask about cutting back or dividing the plant as it increases in size, but this is not either necessary or desirable if a good show is wanted. Look at the plant as grown in public parks. You will see it in massive sizes at the edge of tree or hardy shrub areas where it is undisturbed for years.

If the faded flower stems are cut off before seed is formed, it is very likely that another crop of flowers will appear in mid July. This is happening now, making a lovely surprise summer addition of color.

In many years, there have been new flower spikes appearing in September just in time for the fall shows.

The spikes are superb in arrangements for large wall spaces in the home and at the shows. One stem with a foundation of green broad iris leaves and a few complementary daisy-type flowers in the same shades of yellow and orange is all that is required. But ideas are endless for the use of these as cut flowers.

Such freedom of bloom on a large scale is worth having when it comes with such a trouble-free plant as the Redhot-poker. Removal of old flower spikes in the fall and cleaning up the old leaves in late spring, a reasonably good garden soil, an occasional soaking at the roots in summer, assures a return of glowing spikes of yellow and orange torches or Redhot-pokers.

Rhodesian Oil Flow Fuels U.K. Scandal

By BERNARD NOSSITER
Washington Post

LONDON — A major scandal is threatening to break here over charges that the government-owned British Petroleum and five other major oil companies have been violating the ban on trade with Rhodeseia since the birth of Ian Smith's illegal white government 12 years ago.

An official inquiry into the alleged sanctions-busting is now virtually completed, it was learned Tuesday. A report is due to be given Foreign Minister David Owen in a few weeks.

Vague reports about ban violations have circulated for years. No detailed accounts, supported by memos from BP and Shell, partners in the venture, are surfacing here.

Both companies refuse to confirm or deny the accuracy of these accounts. Both insist they will make no comment until Owen's inquiry is finished.

Shell is owned by British and Dutch interests. Some 51 percent of BP's shares are owned by the government and a former Foreign Office chief, Lord Greenhill, sits on the board.

One extensive version of the alleged sanctions breach has been published in the weekly New Statesman by Martin Bailey and Bernard Rivers. They are consultants to the commonwealth secretariat at the United Nations.

A parallel story has been told by Jorge Jardim in his new book, "Sanctions Double Cross." Jardim is a former Portuguese cabinet minister who was in charge of insuring Rhodesia's oil supplies from Mozambique before that nation gained its independence.

Without oil, the Smith government almost certainly would have collapsed years ago. Since the world trade in oil is dominated by seven major companies — the "Seven Sisters" — it long has been apparent that at least some have been providing white Rhodesians with their lifeline.

The two published descriptions of the trade agree that the companies have observed carefully the division of the Rhodesian market that existed when Smith declared independence. It has been split, down to the decimal point, by BP and Shell acting as a unit; Caltex, a partnership of Standard Oil of California and the Texas Company; Mobil, and a subsidiary of Compagnie Francaise des Petroles, according to the report.

This last company has sometimes been called an "eighth sister" because it collaborates so frequently with the seven who dominate exploration, production, transportation, refining and marketing of the non-Communist world's oil.

(The U.S. Senate Subcomittee on Foreign Economic Policy is in the preliminary stage of an inquiry into American firms' involvement in the Rhodesian sales. Karin Lissakers, of the subcommittee staff, said initial evidence suggests that African subsidiaries of Mobil and Caltex have sold oil to Rhodesia since the issuance of a presidential order in 1968 prohibiting such transactions by American firms.

(Spokesmen for both Caltex and Mobil said that none of their subsidiaries is trading with Rhodesia. A U.S. treasury department probe of Mobil in 1977 found no evidence to suggest Mobil products were going to Rhodesia. Mobil's South African subsidiary, however, refused to provide documents or testimony for that investigation.)

After sanctions were imposed on Rhodesian trade in 1965, the oil companies are said to have worked through thinly disguised intermediaries to bring in their product. According to Bailey and Rivers, the most important conduit worked this way:

Shell-Mozambique, jointly owned by Shell and BP, took oil from tankers docking at Lourenco Marques (now Maputo) the capital of Mozambique. Shell-Mozambique sold it to a specially created South African firm, Freight Services. This outfit then delivered the oil by rail to GENTA, the Rhodesian purchasing agent.

That simple technique made a monkey of the British Navy which was blockading another Mozambique port, Beira, for nine years, threatening to intercept tankers that never came.

A variant of the scheme was described by Jardim, the ex-minister in Portugal's Salazar government. Under this arrangement, the French concern took over Shell's Rhodesian orders and placed a matching order with Shell.

Bailey and Rivers estimate that BP and Shell alone have supplied Rhodesia with 100 million pounds or nearly $190 million in oil products. Their share of the trade, the UN aides wrote, has held at a remarkably steady 42.5 percent.

The New Statesman writers insist that the parent companies in London had to know what their Shell-Mozambique subsidiary was up to. This is because the Portuguese government insisted that Shell-Mozambique countersign customs documents in which Freight Services declared that the oil was heading for Rhodesia.

In the late 1960s, the heads of BP and Shell, William Fraser and Frank McFaden, began worrying about the arrangements, according to memos and cables quoted by the UN aides. They tell how the oil chiefs explained to George Thomson, then the commonwealth secretary, that the great concerns could not be certain that their oil was not reaching Rhodesia.

Lord Thomson, as George Thomson is known today, now says that the companies had been "less than frank" with him.

By 1974, the general manager of Shell-South Africa was writing his board in London, "It is extremely difficult to find a fool-proof arrangement which will demonstrate that we have not been aware of any dealings with Rhodesia."

Bailey and Rivers charge that a BP official ordered Shell-Mozambique to burn papers implicating the company in the trade, and these orders were faithfully executed.

It is not known for certain how Rhodesia has continued to get oil after newly independent Mozambique closed its border against the illicit regime in March 1976. The oil flows, nevertheless.

The inquiry ordered by Owen will have some embarrassing questions to answer, such as: How much did Labor govenment officials know of breaches in the policy they had imposed?

There has been speculation that this and related questions will persuade the government to sit on the report, at least until a general election, widely forecast for October.

Africans 'Just Cannon Fodder'

KHARTOUM (UPI) — Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiry is warning fellow African leaders that big-power rivalry has turned the continent into a battleground and could eventually rob them of their independence.

Numeiry, opening a conference of the Organization of Africa Unity Tuesday, did not mention the presence of 40,000 Cuban and 11,000 French troops in Africa but suggested setting up a peace-keeping force "composed exclusively of Africans."

"The big powers made our continent a battleground and our people the cannon fodder for their wars," he told the largest gathering of African heads of state since the founding of the 49-member organization in 1963.

The 29 listeners — including President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, looking relaxed after a vacation in Austria, and Ugandan President Idi Amin, wearing a blue air force uniform and a shiny revolver on his hip — applauded loudly.

Numeiry, the new OAU chairman, said he feared Africa would follow the same path of Asia into "20 years of war and destruction."

Condemning foreign military intervention on the continent, the most divisive issue facing the conference, Numeiry said "closest attention" should be given to the countries that invite outside involvement.

"I do fear that the thing will end up with the fading away of sovereignty itself as it falls prey to that presence," Numeiry said in his speech in Khartoum's Chinese-built Friendship Hall.

Neither Numeiry nor any of the other speakers mentioned any names. But it was clear they had in mind the presence of 40,000 Cuban troops in Ethiopia, Angola and 11 other countries, and the 11,000 French soldiers spread across Chad, Gabon, the Ivory Coast, Mauritania and Djibouti.

Numeiry also told the leaders if they decide to form an African peace-keeping force, "it should be composed exclusively of Africans and according to the principles and objectives of our organization."

The leaders were unanimous on one subject — the need for tough action against South Africa's white minority government. Numeiry said black Africa must "tighten our siege on this regime and enter into direct confrontation with it."

ATTEMPTED MURDER ON WIFE CHARGED

A 43-year-old Victoria man was charged in provincial court this morning with attempting to murder his wife Tuesday by striking her with a 13-inch iron bar.

The incident occurred in a Victoria law firm's office.

Jano Robert Lipcsei, also known as Robert Hale, of 105-1655 Chambers, was remamnded in custody until Thursday morning by Judge Blake Allan.

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang told court the Crown alleges that Lipcsei attacked his wife, Martha, from behind with the one-inch thick iron bar.

The woman was treated at hospital for head injuries and released.

He said Lipcsei is separated from his wife and divorce proceedings are pending. He also said Lipcsei is restrained by a court order from molesting his wife.

Lang said Lipcsei entered the law firm's office about 3.30 p.m. Tuesday where his wife works as a bookkeeper and struck her.

Outside court, it was larned that a man entered the offices of Stevenson, Doell and Co, 816-1175 Douglas, with an iron bar.

One of the firm's lawyers, Darrel Woods, grabbed the bar and disarmed the man, it was learned.

STAG PARTY CLANGER

OTTAWA (CP) — This was one groom who wouldn't have been able to slip quietly into the church on his wedding day, thanks to exuberant friends.

Police Staff Sgt. Tony Skinner said an unidentified man came to the police station shortly after midnight Tuesday with his bride-to-be and a problem — a big brass cowbell had been tightly chained around his neck by pals at his stag party.

The bell was secured by two heavy locks and, with only two inches of slack, he couldn't pull it over his head, Skinner said.

He freed the embarrassed groom from his yoke with a pair of full-size bolt-cutters. The couple blushed their thanks and left, cowbell in hand.

CZ Earnings Hit Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. reported Tuesday record net earnings for the first six months of 1978.

The company said in a news release earnings rose 40 per cent to $16.6 million or $2.03 a share, compared with $11.9 million or $1.46 a share for the same period in 1977.

The Vancouver-based forest products company said sales rose 15 per cent to $243.4 million compared with $210.8 million in the first six months of 1977.

R. G. Rogers, chairman and chief executive officer, said, however, inflation limited the return on investment to 11 per cent, compared with the previous record return of 13.1 per cent.

Rogers said that the company's sales and earnings performance was largely due to strong demand in United States lumber markets, the favorable Canadian-U.S. exchange rate and a significant gain from the sale of properties.

He said that newsprint sales volume surpassed the level for the same period in 1977, but weak demand and prices for pulp continued to offset to some extent the gains made in other sectors.

Earnings in the second half are expected to decline somewhat as lumber prices and demand slacken, but newsprint is expected to remain strong and there are clear signs of recovery in world pulp prices, Rogers said.

Intensified Herbicide Use Slated in Okanagan Lakes

The provincial government intends to widen its use of the herbicide 2,4-D in the Okanagan area next week, despite encountering opposition Monday, an environment ministry spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said three sites in the Okanagan will be treated with 2,4-D next week if the conditions are right, including about 35 acres in Lake Okanagan and 45 acres in Skaha Lake near Penticton.

The controversial herbicide is used to fight Eurasian water milfoil.

Environment ministry officials were harassed by environmentalists on Monday protesting the government's use of 2,4-D in Kalamalka Lake near Vernon.

However, after a delay of several hours the provincial water investigations branch successfully completed the application after giving the protesters the slip.

The environment ministry spokesman said a ministry lawyer has been sent to the Interior to request adequate RCMP protection for the staff that is handling the application of the herbicide and to ensure the law is being carried out.

RCMP in Vernon were called out Monday to clear the way for environment ministry aquatic plant management staff to enter buildings where the 2,4-D and application machinery were kept.

The government is applying the 2,4-D under the authority of six permits.

Five other permits involving areas close to public beaches will be used for 2,4-D application this fall, while one other group of permits has been rejected, and a final group of permits is still awaiting hearing by the pesticide control appeal board.

2,4-D Critic Wrong.. Whelan

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said today he's concerned that unjustified fears are being generated over the use of the herbicide 2,4-D which government scientists say is safe if properly used.

"There is no question concerning the safety of 2,4-D when used for the purposes for which it is licensed. If there were any, we wouldn't allow it to be used," Whelan said in a statement.

Whelan said studies by agriculture department scientists show there is no danger in the proper use of the herbicide regulated under the Pesticides Control Act.

He said that "alarmist statements about the safety of 2,4-D and its alleged links with birth defects are directly contradicted by the findings of government experts whose careers are dedicated to assuring safety of human health as well as environmental quality."

Whelan said that tests on laboratory animals show that while birth defects can be caused by repeatedly high doses, "there is no realistic risk of this happening under practical conditions."

The chemical 2,4,5-T which despite its name is a distinctly different compound, has a contaminant which is know to cause birth defects but that contaminant is not present in 2,4-D.

Gardom Approves Concept

Attorney-General Garde Gardom today announced approval of the Master concept, aimed at easing the workload of Supreme and County court judges.

Gardom, in a press release, said Victoria will have the first Master.

Tom Halbert, registrar of the Victoria court, is expeceted to be appointed to the position within the next two months.

Gardom said the Master, in addition to having the powers of registrar of the court, will perform many of the judicial duties previously reserved for judges only. They include the power to hear and give validity to wills, the execution of estates and the hearing of amendments to court proceedings.

The duties taken on by the Master will free judges for more time for trials and contested matters and should speed up the court process.

217 Join Drive

A Red Cross blood clinic sponsored by Sidney Rotarians attracted 217 donors Tuesday.

A clinic was held at the University of Victoria today and the Red Cross moves to HMCS Naden for a 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. clinic Thursday.

Red Cross officials have asked for a good turnout to help alleviate the traditional blood shortage that arises in the summer months.

CAMPBELL DEFENDS HIS 'GARRET'

Capital Regional District board chairman Jim Campbell keeps what he calls a modest garret room at the Empress and says it's a bargain for the taxpayers who pay for it.

Campbell, chairman for the past six years, says he must spend at least three days a week in Victoria on business. Since he lives on Saturna Island he often has to stay overnight in Victoria.

He said he secured a garret room about 4½ years ago for which he paid $150 a month. It now costs $240 a month.

He said he spent 160 days in Victoria for the board in 1977, and this required many overnight stays.

Since there is no transportation to Saturna Island that would enable him to commute, Campbell said downtown accommodation was imperative.

Campbell said costs would be much higher if he had a room on a day-to-day basis. No downtown apartment would keep him in touch with the office without transportation costs and be available for the same amount, he added.

Bennett Bears Torch

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett was the torch-bearer Tuesday when he presented the British Columbia Sports Hall of Fame with the original Olympic torch from the 1976 Summer Games in Montreal.

Bennett also gave the hall, located on the Pacific National Exhibition grounds, a cheque for $12,000.

The premier presented the torch to hall member Percy Williams of Vancouver, winner of two gold medals in the sprints at the 1928 games at Amsterdam.

Bennett in turn was given an official history of the 1976 Summer Games and a photo of Williams winning one of his medals.

When asked later about possible funding for a new multi-purpose sports stadium in Vancouver, Bennett said that professional sports has its own unique place as part of the private sector.

He said his own priority would be that of attracting the ordinary person into physical fitness, not propping up professionals.

Bennett said that he is a great sports fan.

"I cheer for the Lions through thick and thin. And I cheer for the Canucks — through thin," the premier said.

Seventh Food Price Comparison List

Two University of Victoria economics students, on a grant from the federal department of labor, are undertaking a summer-long study on the effect of the availability of comparative food price information of Victorians' buying decisions.

The two, who will remain anonymous until the completion of the project, today released the seventh in a series of weekly reports on prices in 28 retail food stores in the Greater Victoria area. Purpose of the reports, according to the students, is to assist consumers in deciding which stores offer the best buys in the purchase of a large grocery order.

A basic food basket listing 65 items, with prices "weighted" in proportion to their importance in the average family food budget according to methods devised by Statistics Canada for a large B.C. city in 1976, was used in the study.

The students say it must be recognized that while prices are of considerable importance to consumers in their shopping habit, other factors cannot be overlooked. Non-price factors such as location, store layout, courtesy and helpfulness of store personnel, parking facilities, quality of merchandise and efficiency of checkout service are takn into account by shoppers when choosing food stores.

The students also noted the difficulty in accurately comparing prices between stores, and say special care is taken to: record prices during a similar specified time each week; include advertised specials as marked on the products; take into account the discrepancies due to sampling error during periods of price change; and price comparable brands where specific national brand items are not available in all stores. Nevertheless, they say, because of problems such as non-availability, more than one price and possible checking errors on an item, a 2 to 3 per cent variation in the total weighted price index can occur.

This week's report includes a history of previous store performance. Week-to-week aberrations may occur but as the study develops, store performance over a period of time should prove a better indicator of its price levels.

Air Canada Slowdown Spreads

WINNIPEG (CP) — A slowdown by Air Canada maintenance workers, cargo personnel and baggage handlers that had caused delays on several flights at Toronto earlier in the week spread to Winnipeg Tuesday.

The workers, members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, have been without a contract since April 1. They are voting this week on whether to give union leadership a strike mandate.

Winnipeg Air Canada spokesman Vern Pryor said flights leaving the city have been delayed only slightly because of the action. He added the airline has asked the Canadian Labor Relations Board for a "cease and desist" order to force workers back to their daily routine.

He said one of the slowdown tactics includes driving baggage carts at slower-than-usual speed.

40% Net Fishing Illegal?

Allegations that up to 40 per cent of commercial net fishermen are fishing illegally have been laid before the Sport Fishing Advisory Committee.

The charges were made by committee member Howard English, who said he received the information from a commercial fisherman.

English said today the information was passed to him by a net fisherman, and it includes charges that net fishermen are evading fisheries patrol boats by fishing in packs, with one boat acting as lookout while the others fish.

Despite restrictions limiting them to fishing two or three days a week, the pack fishing sometimes takes place seven days a week, according to his informant.

Another member of the Sport Fishing Advisory Committee said today that if the charges of widespread illegal fishing by commercial net fishermen are substantiated the federal government should establish an "umbrella" agency using several resources — including RCMP, the Coast Guard and Armed Forces personnel — to beef up federal fisheries patrol and enforcement.

Bob Wright said the use of such agencies would avoid the need for vastly increased expenditure on additional personnel and equipment for the fisheries department.

"If you can get a federal umbrella agency formed you can get the job done at half the cost," said Wright, who is also a former sports fishing adviser to the International Pacific Salmon Commission.

English said today his source claims several other illegal fishing methods are used, including:

-Combination boats (combined trollers and gillnetters) conceal nets under the ice they carry for packing and set them in isolated areas at night, during closure periods;

-Combination boats have been seen fishing every night and trolling every day. Gillnet fish free of net marks have been sold for more money as troll-caught salmon;

-One boat will have two nets in the water and ply between them, safe in the knowledge that a lookout boat will warn them by radio of the approach of patrol craft;

-In 99 per cent of cases steelhead catches are not reported, but are sold as coho.

English said his informant claims that up to 40 per cent of the fishermen are involved in such illegal fishing methods, through which they make substantially larger catches than most legal fishermen.

He said the fact that illegal fishing takes place has been confirmed by the advisors to the IPSC, although the extent of the operations isn't known.

English noted that the federal fisheries department is seriously concerned about the escapement of chinook, and to a lesser extent about coho, in B.C. waters.

Illegal fishing, combined with the steadily increasing efficiency of both the commercial and sport fishing fleets, is accelerating that decline, he said.

FLEET SAILS AGAIN

Tentative Pact Ends Fish Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C.'s salmon fleet was heading for the fishing grounds today after striking tendermen and B.C. fishing companies reached tentative agreement following a marathon bargaining session for a new contract.

George Hewison, negotiator for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU), which represents the 600 tendermen, said tendermen voted on the agreement today.

The agreement came early this morning after 14 hours of talks among the UFAWU, the Fisheries Association and mediator Jack Waterston.

Hewison said the tentative agreement contains no provision for herring catches. Tendermen had opposed any effort by the association to include herring and salmon fisheries in one contract.

In return for the herring exclusion, said Hewison, the union has agreed to a commitment to sign the herring memorandum, which he says will obviate any strike action during the herring operation this year.

He estimated the total increase in wages and fringe benefits at about 10 per cent.

Tendermen currently earn $103 a day and many days involve extended shifts.

The dispute affected about 20 plants along the coast, had idled 14,000 fishermen and other workers and cost the industry about $20 million a week, industry and union spokesmen estimated.

Meanwhile, 4,500 shoreworkers, members of the same union, were expected to vote today on a contract offer from the Fisheries Association. Union negotiators have recommended acceptance.

A union spokesman said the offer to the workers, idled by the tendermen's strike, is for an hourly wage increase of 70 cents.

RCMP HUNTING THIRD VESSEL

RCMP revealed today a hunt is on for a third boat in connection with last Saturday's massive marijuana seizure at Obstruction Island near Tofino.

Superintendent Scotty Gardiner said a search is underway for the 38-foot troller, Sunfish.

He declined to say whether police suspect drugs are aboard.

An RCMP helicopter is in the area today for the third straight day and an unknown number of boats are searching the deeply indented coastline for some sign of the missing boat.

Police believe the Sunfish was travelling with the 120-foot Toernyn and 70-foot Weatherly before the early morning raid involving 50 police officers and 600 to 700 armed forces personnel.

The Sunfish, of Vancouver registery, is owned by Robert Sherman Miller, 33, one of 15 persons charged in connection with the case.

Miller is also the registered owner of the Weatherly.

The manager of the general store at Ahousat, an Indian village near Obstruction Island, told the Times the Sunfish tied up at the village dock sometime Friday. He said the boat apparently had trouble with its radar equipment and left after a few hours.

Gardiner said the boat slipped past police and armed forces vessels in heavy fog Sunday and hasn't been seen since.

"They might have ditched it, repainted it, scrapped the superstructure or run the boat into a cove and covered it with foliage. Anything is possible," he said.

Meanwhile, police this morning began destroying the 439 bales of high grade Colombian marijuana — an estimated 13 tons, worth about $28 million on the street — which were seized in the operation.

A truck loaded with the drug left CFB Esquimalt at 9 a.m. under heavy police escort bound for the North Cowichan municipal dump where it was to be fed into an incinerator.

Gardiner said two complete bales and a collection of random samples — about 150 pounds in all — would be saved for evidence in the court case.

Two RCMP members from Newfoundland are in Victoria to look into a possible tie-in with a similar operation in Newfoundland in 1974. In that case about $4 million worth of marijuana was found stashed in caves in an isolated coastal cove in the province.

Carter Kills Soviet Sale

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, reacting to hardening U.S.-Soviet relations, has killed a computer sale to the Soviet Union and imposed White House veto authority on the sale of oil equipment to Russia, sources said.

A top administration official said the steps were part of a general reaction to the Soviet trials and convictions of two Russian dissidents and two U.S. reporters.

"It is the product of the whole situation," he said Tuesday night.

The Soviets recently convicted dissidents Alexander Ginsburg and Anatoly Shcharansky, despite U.S. protests, and found reporters for The New York Times and the Baltimore Sun guilty of libel.

"The president has taken an appropriate step," said Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd. "He has backed up United States criticism of Soviet oppression with concrete action. The civil trial and sentencing of two American journalists was the Soviet Union's contemptuous answer to world criticism of that nations's program of cruelty to its own citizens."

Carter decided to kill the sale of a sophisticated Sperry-Univac computer. A White House source, when asked whether the sale might be revived at a later date, said it was dead.

The president has been under pressure from several members of Congress, including Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., to block the sale.

The president also put all U.S. oil equipment being sold to the Soviet Union on the commodities control list — a move that means the sales must have presidential approval before being completed.

Also reflecting the colder relations with the Soviet Union, Russian embassy officials were told to meet with State Department representatives to discuss the fate of the Tass office in San Francisco.

That action was seen as a direct response to the trial of two U.S. reporters — Harold Piper of the Baltimore Sun and Craig Whitney of The New York Times — who were convicted on the charges by a Moscow court Tuesday.

No date was set Monday for the meeting of the Russians with U.S. officials soon in Washington. There was no elaboration on the planned meeting, but the move raised the possibility the Tass office in San Francisco would be shut down.

Hostage Taker Suicides

MAPLE CREEK, Sask. (CP) — A man who held a 16-year-old girl hostage for more than 12 hours shot and killed himself today after he released the girl unharmed at an RCMP roadblock near this community about 95 kilometres east of Medicine Hat.

The incident began Tuesday morning when two men, one carrying a shotgun, held up a motel in Brooks, Alta., 175 kilometres east of Calgary, and escaped with an estimated $1,100, police said.

The men then grabbed the girl working as a waitress in the motel restaurant and forced her into a getaway car, police said.

The car headed for Calgary on the Trans-Canada Highway, trailed by RCMP vehicles.

Late Tuesday night, the wanted car reached Calgary and was followed by police through city streets for several hours until one of the men left the car, apparently to look at street signs, and he "walked around the corner straight into the arms of some of our guys," said Insp. Don Nelson of Calgary city police.

The suspect, a 15-year-old, was in RCMP custody, he said.

At one point a window of a police car was shot out after it strayed too close to the getaway car, Nelson said, but no one was injured.

The car containing the suspect and hostage left the Calgary area with police pursuing it.

CACTUS KITTY, one of nine felines competing in the 13th annual Glamor Kitty contest in Hollywood, Fla., gives the crowd on hand at his arrival at the Ft. Lauderdale airport a prickly enough look to live up to his name and sign.

Ferries Threat Defused

The Labor Relations Board Tuesday defused a dispute that tied up a B.C. Ferries vessel and threatened to lead to a system-wide strike.

Board vice-chairman Ron Bone met with the corporation and the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union and convinced them to try to resolve issues through grievance procedures and without further work stoppages.

However, the board placed an officer on standby in case either side needs assistance.

The union had complained of understaffing on the ferries, safety problems due to overloading and management intimidation of employees.

Thirty-two workers aboard the Queen of Coquitlam walked off the job before the 2:30 p.m. sailing Monday.

The ferry left for Nanaimo, B.C. following a meeting between the LRB and the union. Traffic at Horseshoe Bay was backed up more than two kilometres.

E. J. Bentley, a spokesman for the ferry corporation, said the dispute was minor and involved the corporation's critical appraisal of an employee's work. He refused to elaborate.

Union spokesman Bob Peacock accused the corporation of trying to diffuse the issue.

"It's not a small dispute," he said. "It could domino into a full-scale strike."

He said the work stoppage was the culmination of months of frustration with management over staffing and safety issues and management's disregard for workers' complaints.

Indians Lose Fish Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federal Court of Canada refused Tuesday to order the federal fisheries department to allow native Indians to fish in the Fraser canyon while a two-day ban is in effect.

The Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs had applied for an injunction against the ban, which was imposed by the fisheries department because of low salmon counts.

On Monday, fisheries officers laid six charges of illegal fishing and seized about 20 salmon in Lillooet, B.C. as native Indian fishermen defied the ban in effect for Monday and Tuesday on the Fraser River.

The ban was ordered from Boston Bar to north of Lillooet because of low counts of early sockeye salmon headed for the Stuart Lake spawning grounds northwest of Prince George.

Lawyer Louise Mundell argued that under federal fishing regulations for B.C., fisheries officers had no right to impose the ban because they had first issued food fishing licences for Monday and Tuesday but later changed the dates.

This, she said, was against the intent of the regulations.

The ban also caused irreparable harm for band members affected because it stoped their historical fishing and denied them a source of food, said Mundell.

Robert Wismer, a fisheries department lawyer, said that under the regulations the Indian food licences must be considered a concession to the band members since non-Indians are prohibited from taking salmon upriver.

In dismissing the injunction application, Judge Frank Collier said it was his opinion that sections of the fishing regulations merly permit the Indians to fish and the ban was therefore not illegal.

He added that since the ban was for two days, and at the time the injunction application was being heard there was only about half a day left on it, the loss to the Indians could not be a disaster.

Fall Postal Strike Seen 'Inevitable'

OTTAWA (CP) — Crucial postal conciliation talks entered a new phase Tuesday amid fears a disruption in the mail this fall is inevitable.

Louis Courtemanche, chairman of a three-member conciliation board, began closed mediation sessions with negotiators for the post office and the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers following a record 32 days of public hearings.

The closed sessions are usually more productive than the open hearings, generally used to set out the basic positions of the disputing parties. They will have to be if a strike or lockout is to be avoided.

So far, out of 40 articles in the union's contract, only 10 non-contentious items have been resolved.

Still unsettled are the critical issues of pay, use of casual labor by management, job security and the effects of automation.

In a closing statement to the conciliation board at the open hearings, union negotiators said they had "many doubts as to the prospects for success" in the negotiations.

And Jean-Claude Parrot, the union president, repeated his earlier conviction that he has no doubt there will be a strike by the inside workers, likely this fall.

In the statement to the board, the CUPW accused government officials of lying about the conduct of the union and its collective bargaining proposals.

Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne, meanwhile, has expressed concern that the union is not bargaining with "good will" while CUPW has accused postal authorities of using unprincipled tactics to hurt those who are perceived as influential within the union.

The union is also looking for a pay raise to $8.25 an hour from the current $7.14 hourly average, an increase of 15.5 per cent. Postal officials have not made a wage offer.

The United States is also facing postal problems.

Postmaster-General William Bolger is warning each of 554,000 U.S. postal employees that they might be fired if they go on strike when their contract expires at midnight Thursday night.

In letters delivered to postal workers Tuesday, Bolger warned that striking employees would also be committing a felony and might forfeit paid health- and life-insurance coverage.

His letter came as the contract talks were deadlocked over management efforts to eliminate a no-layoff clause the unions insist on retaining in the new contract.

The Eagle May Fly Her Sails After All

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The United States Coast Guard's training barque Eagle will sail into the Inner Harbor Thursday if there is any favorable wind.

That's the word from Cmdr. Paul Welling, USCG, commanding officer of the vessel, to Lt.-Cmdr. Ray Pratte, USCG, information officer for the Eagle's west coast visit.

Pratte says Welling intends to sail from Race Rocks into his berth at the old Blackball terminal, arriving there at 4 p.m.

"He is a sailor. He has told me numerous times if the wind is right he'll be sailing in and out," Pratte told the Times.

Pratte says although there was very little wind when the Eagle approached San Francisco, Welling was sailing her in order not to disappoint spectators.

"Stress to the people from him that he is going to do it if there's any way possible," Pratte said.

Aboard Eagle are 12 officers and 158 cadets from the academy — 18 of them female. This is the first year Eagle has had female cadets aboard.

Pratte said the U.S. coast guard was the first body in the U.S. to allow female cadets in their academy. The U.S. navy, army and air force have since followed suit.

Eagle is the seventh ship to bear that name in U.S. coast guard history. She was built in Hamburg, Germany, in 1936 as a training vessel for German naval cadets. Early in the Second World War she was converted to a cargo ship, transferring men and supplies between East Prussia and Germany proper. She received credit for downing three aircraft in combat.

PRATTE

A U.S. coast guard crew transferred her from Bremerhaven to the U.S. in 1946.

Pratte says Canadian naval reservists from the summer training prmgram at HMCS Malahat will be on hand to help Saturday when groups of senior citizens and the handicapped will be welcomed aboard between 9 and 11 a.m. The ship will also be open to the public 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

"I think the people will be very happy, both here and in Vancouver, when they visit her. She's a very important part of the coast guard tradition," Pratte said.

A full weekend of Captain Cook bicentennial festivities begins Friday.

Along with the Eagle, two vessels of the Japanese Training Squadron — the cruiser-type training vessel Katori and the destroyer Aokumo, will arrive.

Officers of the visiting ships will attend a reception at city hall Friday and officer cadets will be guests at a reception in the Captain Cook bicentennial headquarters on the Causeway.

The visiting Japanese will also lay a wreath on the grave of a Japanese sailor, buried in the naval cemetary il Esquimalt.

On Saturday, the Eagle, along with at least nine B class boats taking part in the race from Vancouver to Seattle on July 29, will be in the Inner Harbor. The two Japanese vessels will be in the dockyard of CFB Esquimalt. All three ships will be open to the public from 1 to 4 p.m.

Musicians from the Canadian armed forces' Naden band will combine with their Japanese counterparts for a band concert in Beacon Hill Park's Cameron bandshell at 2 p.m.

A stag barbecue for the visitors will be held at 6 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park and an inshore regatta will take place in the Inner Harbor and off the Victoria coastline.

Barclay Warburton III of Newport, R.I., president of the American Sail Training Association, said an inshore regatta customarily follows each biennial Tall Ships race in order to allow the participating cadets from various countries to make friends.

Using nine navy whalers, officer cadets from the three visiting ships and the Naval Officers Training Cantre Venture of CFB Esquimalt will compete at whaler pulling in the Inner Harbor from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

They will also compete in sailing races, starting from the Inner Harbor, in Cal 20s and Thunderbirds provided by local sailors. Owners will be aboard to give guidance but the boats will be sailed by the cadets.

At 1 p.m. a six-boat war canoe race will be staged, the competitors — 20 in each whaler — using paddles instead of oars.The finish line will be near the MV Coho's new berth in te Inner Harbor.

Immediately after the war canoe race the Victoria-based Lunenberg schooner Robertson II will arrange racing in the schooner's dories. Four-man crews are expected to take part, representing newspapers, television and radio stations.

The Japanese ships will also be open to special groups of elderly and handicapped citizens at 9 a.m. on

WELLING
. . . sails up if wind right

Saturday and from 9 to 11 a.m. on the Sunday.

Again on the Sunday the three ships will be open to the public from 1 to 4 p.m., as well as the New Zealand frigate HMNZS Waikati, which will also be alongside in the dockyard.

At 8:30 p.m. that evening there will be a prizegiving on the steps of the legislative buildings. The crew of the navy's ketch HMCS Oriole will receive its award for winning the race from Honolulu to Victoria. Awards will be presented to the winners of the Saturday regatta.

A contingent of 300 Royal Canadian Sea Cadets and an 80-piece band from HMCS Quadra, the summer training centre on Goose Spit near Comox, will perform a Sunset Ceremony.

A 30-minure fireworks display in the Inner Harbor will begin at 10 p.m.

On July 24, the sailing vessels will leave for Vancouver at 6 am.

Among those expected to take part in the race from Vancouver to Seattle are Robinson II, Oriole, Lol Killam's Greybeard of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, Lady Frei and Lena Marie of San Francisco, Astral of Los Angeles, the 83-foot topsail schooner Norden from Seattle, Yankee Clipper, the Boy Scouts' 36-foot schooner from Seattle, and Adventuress, a 120-foot schooner which will have an all-girl crew of Girl Scouts.

Cmdr. Neil Norton, co-ordinator of naval events, says the ships will be escorted on either side by RCMP patrol boats, a naval tug and about 30 selected boats belonging to the Canadian Power Squadron.

Peaceful coexistence prevails between nude bathers and the clad variety at Prior Lake

A 'Lawbreaker' Grins and Bares It

Come and get me, chaps; I broke the law on Saturday.

I went nude bathing at Thetis Lake Park's infamous Prior Lake.

Nothing to it really. You just whip 'em off and watch out for the waterlillies.

I knew I was at Prior Lake (very much in the news lately and under threat of a heavy-handed clampdown by City Hall) because there was a sign reading "No Nude Bathing." And pinned on a tree at the top of the trail was a cigarette packet with the words "Sharon: Went to Nudist Club in Cobble Hill. Sandi."

So one or two were put off by the thought of the fully-clothed law stalking them through the bushes. But most stayed.

Now I realize I risk the wrath of one wife and the whole Women's Liberation Army in saying this but I'm afraid I arrived just a trifle late — from the point of view of getting artistic photographs, of course.

As I went down the trail a little hesitantly, I passed three or four couples (dressed again by now) on their way back up to their cars. That, I discovered when I reached the solitary float, was the last of the women bathers.

All that were left were five guys and a petition.

"You should have been here a bit earlier," one of the five said after I'd taken great risk to my clothes and camera by identifying myself. "There were about 30 or more down here then."

Most of them, they said, swam and sunbathed in the altogether. But this was no big deal.

"We're not hurting anybody," Paul Nelson pointed out. "We just come here to swim and lie in the sun and there should be somewhere you can do this if you want to."

Some people have been going to Prior Lake and other tiny backwaters of the park to swim in the nude for 20 years, he said. Last year there was no trouble and now suddenly there is.

When you look around at the tranquility of what is really no more than a pond edged with waterlillies and appreciate its remoteness (you need good instructions and patience to battle a rough gravel road to find it) you realize, as they say, that the whole thing is being blown out of proportion.

Headlines have attracted a few onlookers.

"There are some people, mainly elderly ones, who come and stand high on that rock up there and watch us," said Paul. "They are generally ignored. One guy with a dog drops by regularly. I think he really comes to look at the ladies. Yesterday he came on strong and said he was taking all our licence plate numbers to report us."

max low

"And a couple of young guys in a new sports car roared in for the first time today and said 'Okay, where's the action?' They'd come, they thought, to pick up chicks. But this isn't a sex trip at all.

"There are people who wear swim suits and people who don't. And there's peaceful co-existence between the two.

"We get all sorts of people. Today we had a family with two young daughters nine or 10, all swimming in the nude. And we often get a pregnant woman here and there. But everyone is happy and relaxed together."

Just as I was starting to feel a little more relaxed myself, Richard Creech told me quite politely that he wished I hadn't found it necessary to come.

So did I, I told him as I was hot and dry. But summer was a slack time for reporters and politicians, I explained. They had to find something to do. I think he understood.

"It shouldn't make headlines, but it does," said Richard a little sadly. "We don't want any fuss."

"No," Paul added with a grin. "For one thing it will get too bloody crowded."

Peace and tranquility at the side of Prior Lake has been somewhat disturbed since city hall cut a new trail down to the water's edge, fancied up the float, installed two toilets and then slapped up its "No Nude Bathing" sign a couple of weeks ago.

And so Paul and Richard and the others have drawn up their petition calling for an amendment to the existing bylaw forbidding nude bathing in (certain traditional areas of) Thetis Lake Park. The amendment would make swim wear optional. Already containing more than 100 signatures representing 95 per cent of the little lake's recent users, the petition is soon to be presented to city hall.

In the meantime, our fearless naked friends intend to carry on regardless.

"I'll swim in the nude here unless they pack me up in a paddy wagon and take me away — every time," threatened Richard.

So I found myself hot and nodding in agreement and just couldn't get out of it. My nude swim, that is.

"Sure, why not?" asked Paul. "How's that for a starting line for your column: 'I broke the law today.' A law that is a vestige of an archiac Victorian era.

"Then as soon as you go in, the paddy wagon will pull up," he chuckled.

But I was past the point of no return. So I stripped and flipped.

And I must say, though I kind of enjoyed the feeling of freedom, I did keep a close eye on the trail for the cops . . .

Tourist Flood Swamps City

The sold-out sign went up in Victoria hotels and motels at 6 p.m. Wednesday as tourists began arriving in numbers for the Captain Cook festival.

The Visitors Information Centre used its emergency housing program for the first time this summer, directing tourists to approved private homes for accommodation.

Even more visitors are arriving today and all 3,802 hotel and motel units in the Greater Victoria area were expected to be filled by 3 p.m.

"Thousands of people are arriving but it is all orderly and manageable," VIC housing committee chairman Ken King said.

"We have not had to get involved with school yards and things like that. We should be able to accommodate everyone in the approved housing."

Wednesday night, tourists were directed to Sooke, Sidney and some as far away as Duncan for accommodation.

In addition, there are 100 approved private homes in Victoria where visitors can rent rooms. After 6 p.m. a few hotel rooms may become available due to cancellations.

"People are staying longer than we expected and that is adding to the crowd," King said. "Everyone wants to stay as long as possible because there are so many things going on this week."

King was referring to the arrival of the tall ship, the Eagle, on Thursday and the regatta of sailing cadets on Saturday, climaxed Sunday by closing ceremonies and a fireworks display. The Eagle will arrive, with sails up at least as far as the breakwater, about 4 p.m. Thursday.

On the ferries, traffic flow was heavy Wednesday and waits were up to three hours at Tsawwassen.

"It peaked about 1 p.m. Wednesday," assistant traffic manager Bill Bouchard said. "We left 300 cars, which is a load-and-a-half."

Bouchard said those trying to avoid the rush should travel before 9 a.m. or after 7 p.m. The flow is much heavier from Tsawwassen to Swartz Bay than in the reverse direction.

During the first two weeks of July, he said, vehicle traffic was up 16 per cent over 1977 and passenger traffic was up 17 per cent. The Marguerite is travelling with full loads and passenger totals are up 30 per cent from last year.

Arrival of the visitors has local tourist officials heaving a sigh of relief.

After a brisk June, the tourist flow was below expectations during the first two weeks of July. Now the 1977 totals are expected to be greatly surpassed.

During the first two weeks of July there had been only about 14,000 enquiries at the VIC Causeway bureau, down from 15,658 in the corresponding period of 1977. Enquiries are increasing dramatically, however, as the Cook festival approaches.

In June, which had been a banner month in the city, there were 11,700 enquiries at the bureau, up from 10,248 the previous June.

Meanwhile, the crowds might have been higher this week except for warnings being circulated in Seattle about expected overcrowding in Victoria this week.

Several Saanich residents who protested to council's finance committee Tuesday night about hefty increases in property tax bills were advised by Mayor Mel Couvelier to take their complaints to the provincial government.

Couvelier noted that a restructuring of the assessment formula was largely responsible for the increased taxes in Saanich this year, and it is better for taxpayers to make their concerns known directly to the provincial cabinet.

If local politicians do so they are accused of headline-grabbing, he added.

The residents told council's finance committee that Saanich should have raised more of an outcry against the imposition of the new assessment formula, and some said aldermen were too preoccupied with lavish and unnecessary spending on recreation facilities which duplicate existing amenities in the area.

Fred and Eleanor Atkin, 4981 Wesley Road, said in their letter they objected to tax money being spent on such frills as tennis courts "when our street is so full of potholes it's almost impossible for two cars to meet."

Festival Balloons

Air Canada is sending a 70-foot-high balloon to Victoria Thursday as part of the Captain Cook festival.

The company has asked permission to tether the balloon on the lawn of The Empress to give rides to invited guests.

The balloon will remain tethered.

Air Canada has also applied to city council for permission to move the balloon to Beacon Hill Park Sunday. Council will decide Thursday morning.

Wind conditions will govern how many rides can be given, the company said. If weather conditions are favorable, the tethered balloon rides may be offered to the public before the weekend is over.

The balloon is a salute to the visit of the Tall Ship to the province and it will follow the Eagle to Vancouver on Monday.

The balloon folds down into a four-foot diameter bag and weighs only 150 pounds. When inflated the bag itself becomes 55 feet wide and 63 feet high.

Including the passenger cabin, the balloon stands 70 feet high.

Pilot is Wayne Metler of Kitchener, Ont., who will decide on flight feasibility.

After Victoria and Vancouver, the balloon goes to Edmonton for the Commonwealth Games.

Theatres, Union To Meet

A negotiating meeting has been set for Friday between the B.C. Projectionists Union and representatives of Odeon and Famous Players theatres in B.C.

The 113 projectionists last Friday rejected the companies' latest offer. The employees are in a legal position to strike, having served 72-hour strike notice more than a week ago.

Wages and job security have been reported as the key issues in the dispute.

Posting of Names Defended In Fight Against Shoplifting

A security firm involved in a campaign to fight shoplifting today defended its policy of posting the names of individuals it apprehends in local stores.

Larry Scott, director of operations for Can-Am Investigations Ltd., said his company began posting names after signs warning shoppers that store detectives were on duty failed to deter shoplifting.

"All we're trying to do is say (to potential shoplifters) 'Look, we're serious — we were hired to do a job and we're doing it.'"

Scott said his company was not out to embarrass those picked up on shoplifting charges.

"These signs are strictly to act as a deterent. We don't want to pick anyone up, we want to prevent the crime from happening."

He said shoplifting is a major problem in the Greater Victoria area and the cost of it is causing significant increases in the price of goods.

Scott made his statements in reply to concerns voiced Tuesday by Victoria Civil Liberties Association president Frank Preston.

Preston said his organization was concerned about the practice some stores have of posting the names of individuals apprehended for shoplifting.

"I'm sure that shoplifting is a serious problem in town . . . but individual rights have to be protected and we're concerned with that aspect of it," said Preston today.

He said his association was actively studying the situation.

Preston urged anyone with complaints about the matter to contact his association.

Third-Party Aid Urged In Brewery Row

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A spokesman for employees currently embroiled in the B.C. brewery industry strike-lockout says he would welcome the intervention of a third party to get settlement talks going again.

Union business agent John Langley says it will likely take such a move to shake the current doldrum-like standoff in the dispute which has affected 1,200 brewery workers and idled at least 4,000 hotel industry employees.

He said he wished the provincial government or Labor Relations Board would get involved.

But Jim Matkin, B.C.'s deputy labor minister, said his department will only intervene if requested to do so by the parties. So far that hasn't happened.

Langley inferred that the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers is not going to make a request for third-party intervention.

"Sometimes such a move is taken as a sign of weakness," Langley said in an interview from Vancouver.

"But we are certainly not getting any weaker. If anything we are becoming more entrenched."

He said he would have to give some thought as to whether or not the union will ask for third-party intervention.

"There appears to be some reluctance on the part of the other side to meet."

Eric Harris, spokesman for the Brewery Employers Labor Relations Association (BELERA), said the companies don't seem too interested at this time in having a third party on the scene.

He said the breweries have made two offers to the employees which were said to be final and the companies don't see any responsibility for initiating additional action.

Harris said often in disputes such as this one something happens out of the blue and the whole thing is resolved.

"I don't think it is in anyone's interest to continue the dispute."

Five B.C. breweries - three in Greater Vancouver, one in Victoria and another in Creston - locked out their employees June 8 after union members at Carlings in Vancouver went on strike May 26.

Langley said the bargaining atmosphere might have been less stormy and the current confrontation avoided if the breweries hadn't suddenly decided in May to bargain jointly through BELERA. The union wanted to bargain with the breweries on an individual basis.

"They were trying to change the bargaining structure in mid-stream," he said.

Langley said the breweries' strategy is dictated from eastern Canada.

"It is an eastern decision made by eastern management which they are trying to impose on the West. But what is acceptable in the East may not be acceptable in the West.

"We like our autonomy."

Harris denied that the bargaining is being orchestrated from eastern Canada.

"I'm negotiating on behalf of B.C. companies . . . reflecting the B.C. climate and the situation here."

He said it is just coincidental that there happens to be a similar brewery industry dispute in Manitoba and Alberta.

"I don't even know what the full extent of the issues are in Manitoba."

Aside from the joint bargaining issue, the major stumbling block, according to the union, is the breweries' proposal for a cost-of-living allowance (COLA).

The brewery workers want a clause that would give them, on a quarterly basis, an additional cent an hour for every .4 increase in the Consumer Price Index.

The companies have offered a lump-sum COLA which would be paid in May, 1979, depending on the inflation rate during the previous four months. The provision would pay the workers an extra cent for every .3 increase in the Consumer Price Index but it would only trigger after a three-point increase in the cost of living.

Harris said the companies feel their offer is fair and equitable.The union doesn't think so.

Langley said the only way the union will back off on its COLA demand is if the federal government will give some assurances that it is going to somehow crack down on rising prices.

"We have to try and protect ourselves and this is the only way."

CP Rail Aware Of Sudden E&N Overflow

CP Rail's superintendent of passenger services in Vancouver says the passenger situation on the E & N line betwen Victoria and Couurtenay is being monitored.

But Don Collings said no decision has been made on a request that an extra car be put on the run to handle passenger overloads.

The E & N Employees Committee sent a telegram to CP Rail's regional headquarters in Vancouver appealing for an additional passenger car to handle an overflow of traffic on the Victoria-to-Courtenay run.

Committee chairman John Cooper of Victoria said people are being refused service because the lone passenger car is operating at more than capacity.

About 200 passengers are being carried daily, he said. The car has only 68 seats.

Cooper said there are nine cars sitting unused in the CPR's Glen Yard in Montreal and suggested one of them should be sent here.

Collings said today there has been a surge in traffic since Premier Bill Bennett went on his celebrated promotional trip on the line two weeks ago.

A reduction in fares on July 1 contributed to the run's increased popularity.

He said three to 10 persons are being refused service each day because of an overflow. However, this morning 25 persons were turned away, a record number.

TANK EXPLODES

MANILA (AP) — A leaking gasoline tank exploded and sent flames roaring through a mining village, killing eight persons and injuring 17 others, authorities said. Officials said the blast killed five children in Talisay, and the hamlet was virtually destroyed in the resulting fire.

Stuart Should Campaign in a Tank

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

It wouldn't surprise anyone if George Stuart showed up Thursday at Western Speedway driving a tank. At least he'd survive.

He didn't Tuesday night — for the second time in 20 days — and it cost him a victory in the second race of the International Drivers' Challenge series for superstocks.

The Campbell River driver was bumped out of first place on the final lap by Tacoma's Ron Eaton, who nicked him on turn two, forcing him to spin out.

Third race of the series is scheduled Thursday night at Western starting with time trials at 7.

Tuesday marked the second consecutive appearance at Western in which Stuart was pushed out of victory square via the collision route.

He was the victim of the same misfortune in the Victoria 100 NASCAR race on June 28 when Jimmy Insolo of Mission Hills, Calif., banged into him on lap 59. The best Stuart could do in that one was a recovery to third place while Insolo got the checkered flag.

Eaton was given the checkered Tuesday night before 3,381 fans who could hardly believe their eyes, but he lost the win moments later when an IDC committee docked him two placings for hitting Stuart and put him back to third.

That gave the victory to Victoria's Roy Haslam, who was running third when the incident occurred and had scooted past the spinning Stuart to cross the finish line behind Eaton.

Racing rules say that a driver, even if he is the victim of a foul, cannot be moved up in the field. The penalized driver can only be placed back.

Stuart thus finished second but he didn't stick around to elaborate on his misfortune. He left the infield immediately but one of his crew said simply that the incident was a "cheap shot."

Eaton disagreed.

"I had the brakes on at the time," the Tacoma driver said. "Stuart went into the turn high and he changed direction and tried to come down. There was no way I could miss him. There was a lot of oil on the track. I've never bumped a car intentionally in my life."

Eaton criticized Victoria's Tony Johnson, who was right in the middle when Stuart finally passed Eaton on turn four of the second-last lap. Until then Stuart spent most of the 75-lap race on Eaton's bumper.

But at that point Eaton was forced to go high on the track to get around Johnson while Stuart found an opening on the inside and had the lead firmly in hand going into the last lap.

"Johnson really worked me over," Eaton argued. "I just couldn't believe it."

The race committee did, though, penalizing Johnson two spots — from eighth to 10th — for failing to yield when Eaton tried to go by him.

Will Eaton return for Thursday's race?

"I don't know," he replied. "The crew is thinking of bagging the whole thing."

Haslam, appropriately, had little to say.

"It's called racing luck," he allowed. "We were in the right place at the right time. Other than that, I have no comment other than to say I wasn't happy with the way the car (a 1978 Camaro) handled."

He and his crew plan to change the front-end suspension for Thursday.

The victory moved Haslam past Eaton into first place in the series points standings. Although the totals won't be finalized until tonight, Haslam unofficially is about 30 points ahead of Eaton, who is now second.

It was not a happy night for Victoria's Roy Smith, making his first drive in a new '78 Camaro built by Aircraft Standards of Seattle. Ignition problems forced him to retire early. His crew plans to reset the timing for tomorrow night's race.

Smith and Haslam timed in fourth fastest in 17.01 seconds. The best time was logged by Victoria's Joe Musfelt, 16.75 in a '74 Camaro. Stuart, in a '76 Nova, was second in 16.79 while Eaton, in a '76 Ventura, was third at 16.82.

Barry Powers of Regina took the 25-lap "B" main and the "B" trophy dash. The "A" dash went to Eaton while Haslam took the fast heat and Brian Green of Prince George captured the slow heat.

A total of 30 cars timed in but at least four were left on the ferry dock in a four-hour lineup at Tsawwassen earlier Tuesday and failed to make it in time. Among them was pre-race favorite Don Dowdy of Yakima along with Reg Kennedy of Surrey.

Carl Fleet, brother of Western Speedway regular Ron Fleet, just made it across after hauling his '76 Camaro from Aurora, Ont., north of Toronto. Fleet is running fourth in the Ontario stock car series in which Western track record holder Earl Ross of Ailsa Craig, Ont., competes. Ross' record time here is 16.627 seconds for the four-tenths-mile oval.

Canada Should Form "Cheat Canada" Body

Ms. Iona Campagnolo,
Minister, Fitness and Sport,
Ottawa.

Dear Iona:

The Commonwealth Games are only two weeks away, yet it has come to my attention that not one penny of federal funds has gone into research and preparation for the most popular of all international sports events.

I refer, of course, to cheating.

Look around you, Iona. Cheating has become very big internationally. So many athletes are doing it the International Olympic Committee may recognize it as a sport and give it a logo of its own: a dope pusher rampant on a field of athletes holding up little urine sample bottles.

We cannot make the same mistake we made in international hockey. As a nation we must not be caught in the fraud gap. I urge you to move at once on the formation of a new national sports body: Cheat Canada.

It's not that Canadian athletes can't cheat. The potential has always been there. But without direction it can be a haphazard sort of thing. We're piddling around with little under-the-table pin money ploys as a substitute for scholarships while the rest of the world is out there cheating in actual competition.

On Sunday a Belgian cyclist named Michel Pollentier who'd won the 16th stage and the over-all leader's yellow jersey in the Tour de France was suspended for attempting to stiff the rules committee on dope control. On Monday, they hit Frenchman Antoine Guttierez with the same charge.

It seems they'd been caught trying to beat the urine test — a post-race ceremony, once restricted to horses, brought in when athletes discovered that a benny didn't necessarily have to be named Jack.

Athletes are required to fill little bottles immediately after competing. Thus equipped, doctors can make sure they competed with nothing in their veins stronger than the will to win.

The two cyclists thought they had a way to beat it.

Just before the race they did No. 1 and stored the urine in rubber bulbs, which they tucked under their shirts. When the time came to take the test they stepped into the booth, squeezed the bulb, and the old stuff ran down a tube taped along their arm and dripped into the bottle.

Damnit, Iona, that's not spur-of-the-moment cheating. It smacks of organization, not to mention a strong stomach.

Two men from two different countries, both using the same bulb-full-of-old-urine trick? And you say we're not falling behind?

Where are our urologists, stepping forward to offer their expertise on the finer points of hitting the bottle cleanly with the stuff from the tube?

Where are our golf pros, teaching our athletes the overlapping grip so a man can hold the bottle and conceal the tube with the same hand while innocently holding his zipper at the ready with the other?

Where are the scientists planning ahead, the laboratories on red-alert status to beat the Russians to the next logical step: the drug that won't show up in the urine test at all?

Must we always follow the leaders? Can we never produce first-class cheaters of our own?

You should have seen it coming. You were in Montreal for the Olympic Games. Remeber the Russian fencer? Boris Onischenko had wired his epee to register non-existant hits on the electronic scoreboard. He'd have gotten away with it, too, only he overloaded the thing and it lit up like a pinball machine while his opponent was standing two feet out of reach.

But he tried, Iona. He tried.

Can we do less?

Since only a crash program can save us now, I suggest you go straight to the mother lode. You want cheating, ask a pro football player.

I knew an American import once who was recalled to the United States by his draft board. When last seen he was beating his knee with a knotted wet towel.

"Makes it swell up," he explained. "Ain't no way they take a guy with a bad knee."

In case the knee trick didn't work he pigged out on Coke just before the test to screw up his urine. He guzzled so much the Army must have thought it was drafting a sugar beet. And in case that failed he put a flake of corn starch unders his fingernail to drop into the sample. "Screws it up fine," he said. "Jes' fine!"

I'm not sure which one did it, but he never missed a game.

One Canadian linebacker had his arm in a cast for years. It allowed him certain liberties with opposing linemen, who tended to fall down when struck by it.

Game after game officials checked the cast to be sure it was covered with soft padding, and it was always soft. That's because he'd soak it in water to soften the plaster just before leaving the dressing room. By the end of the first quarter it had dried to where it was hard as a rock.

Another linebacker used to take the rolls out of the adhesive tape cans and use the tape to fix the cans to his arms under his sweater. It was like being hit by a garbage can.

That's the type of expertise and dedication we need if we're ever to become a world athletic power. For Cheat Canada, Iona. I'm begging.

There's no time to waste. Order the blazers right now.

Rocks Lose Rough One

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Burrards played the part of spoilers — again — by beating Victoria Sharmocks 15-9 in Western Lacrosse Association play here Tuesday night.

The Mann Cup champions, who edged Victoria in the WLA playoff final last season, prevented the Irish from clinching first place by scoring the victory at Kerrisdale Arena.

But the Shamrocks have another chance to claim clear title tonight while playing Nanaimo Timbermen at 8 in Victoria's Memorial Arena.

Burrards scored eight power-play goals to beat the Victoria club in a penalty-filled game from which nine players were ejected.

Rico Bellusci scored five goals to lead the Burrards, four of them coming with Vancouver holding a man advantage.

Pat Ryan added three for Vancouver, which held period leads of 5-4 and 11-6. Doug Hayes and Dave Tasker each had a pair.

Norm Baker had three goals and three assists to lead Victoria. Chris Hall, Charn Dhillon, Dan Green, Larry Bell, Gerry McKenna and Gerry Cadwallader completed the Victoria scoring with one goal each.

Vancouver picked up 100 of the game's 195 penalty minutes. Nine players, five from Burrards, were ejected in the third period after a brawl started by Victoria's Baker and Ward Sanderson of Vancouver.

Cadwallader, goaltender Scott Marshall, Jerry Kustaski and Dennis Somner were sent to the Victoria dressing room while Sanderson, Pinder, Taki Vohalis, Joe Marrello and Brad Berrow of Burrards were ejected.

Bellusci received a game misconduct earlier in the period.

Larry Smeltzer made 32 saves for Victoria before being replaced by Marshall, who blocked two shots. Dave Evans stopped 33 for the Burrards before Berrow replaced him and turned back a pair.

Pair of Loggers Cup Down Mussels

Bill Demo and Pete Rabassa proved a deadly combination Tuesday night, guiding Gray's Harbor Loggers to an 8-2 decision over Victoria Mussels in Northwest League baseball play before about 400 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

It was the seventh straight victory for the Loggers, who are now 17-11 for the season.

Defeat left Victoria with a 9-16 record after winning five of their last nine games.

Demo, using an assortment of off-speed breaking pitches and an occasional fastball, shackled Victoria batters with three hits while striking out six and yielding only three walks.

Rabassa put on an awesome batting display.

He hit three doubles in three turns at bat before slamming a home run in the sixth inning. Rabassa drove in five runs before hitting a hard ground-out in the ninth.

Two of the three Victoria hits came on successive home runs in the second inning.

Bob Potts lined his first of the season to left field with one out and Kevin Newby followed with a drive to right field to produce his second four-bagger.

Newby's scratch seventh-inning single was the only other hit allowed by Demo.

Starter Frank Lucarelli, now 1-3, took the loss, giving up five walks, six hits and four earned runs in three and two-thirds innings.

In other league action, Walla Walla Padres increased their edge in the Northern Division by bombarding five Bellingham pitchers for 10 hits en route to a 16-0 victory over the Mariners, who are second in the same division, while Eugene Emeralds halted Bend Timber Hawks, 2-1.

A three-run homer by Bob Volk paced the Padres' attack. Clubmate Doug Gwodz rapped a two-run double and drove in four runs.

Bellingham committed six errors in defeat.

Timber Hawks managed 10 hits against Eugene but left 11 runners on base in their fifth consecutive loss. Eugene pitcher Brad Lesley struck out eight batters and walked only two.

By Grace of Chub, Sutton Bags 200th

By Associated Press

Don Sutton thanked the umpires, J. R. Richard thanked his natural ability and Eric Rasmussen thanked his lucky stars in a night that saw some outstanding pitching performances in baseball's National League.

Los Angeles right-hander Sutton, in uniform only by the grace of league president Chub Feeney, made a six-hitter stand up for a 7-2 win Tuesday night over Pittsburgh Pirates and his 200th career victory.

Richard, Houston Astros' strikeout king, fanned 10 and gave up three hits to beat Philadelphia Phillies 9-1. And Rasmussen, acquired by San Diego in May from St. Louis, hurled a five-hitter in his first start against his former club as the Padres beat the Cardinals 3-2.

Sutton, Richard and Rasmussen weren't the only pitchers in the league with live arms Tuesday night. Phil Niekro handcuffed New York Mets on six hits in Atlanta Braves' 4-3 victory and Hal Dues of Montreal yielded only four hits to Cincinnati in 6 2-3 innings as the Expos downed the Reds 3-1.

Jerry Koosman of the Mets also threw a six-hitter, but lost to Niekro.

Elsewhere, Chicago Cubs edged San Francisco Giants 7-6 in 11 innings as both clubs used five pitchers.

Sutton, now 10-8, picked up his 200th victory only one day after Feeney decided not to suspend him after he was caught throwing defaced baseballs last Friday night in St. Louis. Sutton was ejected from the game after home plate umpire Doug Harvey confiscated several scuffed balls.

Joe Ferguson's three-run homer highlighted Los Angeles' five-run outburst in the fourth inning off Pirates starter Don Robinson, 5-4, while Sutton walked one and struck out six in his seventh complete game of the season.

"I looked at quite a few balls tonight and I saw nothing out of the ordinary," said plate umpire Paul Pryor.

Sutton joins Don Drysdasle as the only Dodgers pitchers with 200 or more career victories. Drysdale finished his career with 209. Sutton, whose career record is 200-152, became the 76th pitcher in baseball history to win 200 games.

Niekro, 11-9, struck out seven with his knuckleball and didn't walk a batter. Dale Murphy hit a two-run homer for the Braves in the sixth, giving him six in six games.

In the American League, Otto Velez's RBI single, his third hit in as many at-bats, with two out in the 10th inning gave Toronto Blue Jays a 13-12 win over Seattle Seattle Mariners. Milwaukee Brewers dumped Chicago White Sox 7-2, Baltimore Orioles whipped Texas Rangers 5-1, Cleveland Indians trimmed California Angels 8-3 and Oakland A's stopped Detroit Tigers 6-3.

Macs Extend Leaders Under New Coaches

Victoria McDonalds, playing for the first time under new coach Steve Buckley, stayed close to league-leading Burnaby Cablevision but dropped a 13-11 decision to last year's national champions Tuesday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Buckley and assistants John Entzminger and Dave Lowden were behind the bench for the first time as the Victoria club trailed by narrow period scores of 5-3 and 10-8 but were unable to close the gap before time ran out in the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League contest.

Paul Delmonte scored three goals and John Swan counted a goal and five assists to pace the Cable attack.

Lloyd Symonds and Gary Purdon helped out with two goals each and other singles were fired by Steve Lajeune, Lyle Robinson, John Purdon, Derek Dickson and Terry Bingley.

Tarey Pollock led Victoria with three goals and four assists while intermediate pickup John Crowther added two and singles came from Kevin Kennedy, Mike Game, Greg McInnes, Rhys Wickes, Doug Angrove and Kelly Jay.

Bill Thomas and Mike Duch combined goaltending talents to block 45 shots on the McDonalds net while Rod Bannister made 42 saves for Burnaby.
